3. In our last annual Report we mentioned that there had been a decrease in the average daily number of persons relieved both in and out of the workhouses from February, 1892, to February, 1893, as compared with the number so relieved in the preceding year.

We have now to report that the returns for the weeks included in the statement on pages 2 and 3 show an increase in the average daily number of persons relieved in the workhouses, and a decrease in the average daily number of persons who received out-door relief during 1893-94 as compared with the numbers relieved in the year 1892-93.

The average daily number of persons in the workhouses during the weeks included in the statement was 40,961, of those maintained in public institutions and the District School at Trim,

1,152, and of those on out-door relief, 57,979, making a total of 100,092, which represents 2·17 per cent. of the estimated population of the country, and is less than the total average daily number in the year 1892–93 by 627.

4. Workhouse Rules.

In the Appendix* will be found a copy of an Order made by us during the past year amending the Workhouse Rules with regard to the use of tobacco by inmates of workhouses. The Order referred to authorizes Boards of Guardians to allow tobacco (or snuff) to inmates of the aged and infirm classes, upon passing a resolution to that effect, after due notice, specifying the quantity of either of these articles to be allowed to each person. Many Boards of Guardians have already availed themselves of the power given by this Order.

5. Classification of Workhouse Inmates.

In a circular issued in November last† we notified to Boards of Guardians that we would be prepared to consider a proposal to permit arrangements being made in any workhouse by which each aged married couple might occupy the same apartment subject to certain rules and conditions being observed, and the suggestion is receiving the attention of some Boards of Guardians. This will, of course, necessitate alterations being made in the workhouse buildings to provide separate apartments for the couples referred to.

6. Dietary.

We deemed it expedient to bring under the notice of Boards of Guardians the differences which existed between the scales of dietary for healthy inmates in force in Irish as compared with English and Scotch workhouses, with the view to steps being taken by them, if they so desired, to secure a more liberal diet for the inmates of their respective workhouses, especially those of the aged and infirm classes. As a result of this action on our part improved dietaries have been adopted by Boards of Guardians in many cases. A copy of the circular on this subject is inserted in the Appendix.‡

7. Seed Potatoes Supply Acts, 1890 and 1891.

As mentioned in our last Annual Report these Acts were put into operation in 110 Unions, and the sum which became due to the State in respect of the loans advanced for the benefit of Electoral Divisions in those Unions amounted to £240,405.

Under section 3 of the Act of 1890 this amount was repayable to the Commissioners of Public Works by two equal instalments, the first on the 1st day of August, 1892, and the second on the corresponding day in the following year. Of the first instalment, amounting to £120,202, there had been paid at the date of our last Report a sum of £118,457, which left a balance of £1,745 due by five Unions. This balance was paid, however, in the course of some months afterwards.

As regards the second instalment which fell due on the 1st of August last, £107,575 had been paid on the 31st of March in the present year, leaving £12,627* due on that date by the Boards of Guardians of eighteen Unions.

8. Seed Supply Act, 1880.

It will be seen by paragraph 5 of our last Report that on the 31st of March, 1893, nine Unions remained indebted to the Commissioners of Public Works to the extent of £12,057† on account of the loans advanced to them under the provisions of the above mentioned Act.

No further payment has since been made on account of this indebtedness.

The total amount advanced under this Act, after crediting the Unions with certain sums refunded, was £598,306, of which there has been repaid a sum of £586,249.

9. The following table shows the numbers of persons in receipt of in-door and out-door relief, respectively, in the last week of each month from March, 1893, to March, 1894, as compared with the weeks of the previous corresponding period.

The returns for 1893–94 summarized above show an increase in the numbers of persons relieved in workhouses in nine of the weeks included in the table, as compared with the corresponding weeks of the previous year, and a decrease in the remaining weeks. There was a decrease in the numbers of persons who received out-door relief in ten of the weeks included in the table, and an increase in the remaining weeks.

* Further payments have since been made reducing this balance to £8,910, and the number of the indebted Unions to nine (see first note on pages 192–3).

† For the portion of this amount due in each case see column 8 of the table on pages 186 to 193, and the second note on pages 192–3.

It will be observed from the above that there was a decrease of 551 in the number admitted in sickness, and an increase of 8,928 in the number admitted who were not sick, thus showing a net increase of 8,377 in the total number admitted during the year as compared with the number in the previous year. There was an increase of 210 in the number suffering from fever or other infectious disease, and the total number of persons relieved in workhouses was greater than in the previous year by 8,570.

18. AMALGAMATION OF UNIONS.

In our last Annual Report we referred to the fact that we had under consideration the question of dissolving the Strokestown Union and adding the Electoral Divisions comprised therein to adjoining Unions. A difference of opinion has existed amongst the Guardians of the Strokestown Union respecting this proposal, and we have the matter still under consideration.

We have received applications from the Boards of Guardians of Ballymahon and Glennamaddy Unions for the dissolution of those Unions and their amalgamation with Unions adjoining. We have directed the necessary preliminary inquiry to be held by one of our Inspectors in each of these cases.

19. DISSOLUTION OF BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

In paragraph 16 of our last Report we mentioned that we had dissolved the Board of Guardians of the Tralee Union, and appointed paid officers in their stead. We have now to report that Guardians were elected in that Union at the general election of Guardians in the month of March last, and that at the present time there is not any Union under the management of paid officers.

20. District Schools.

The number of children maintained in the District School at Trim by the Boards of Guardians of the contributory Unions during each week from the 4th of March, 1893, to the 3rd of March last is shown in the table on page 3. On the 31st of March the number in the school was 190, of whom 49 were from Trim, 50 from Drogheda, 35 from Navan, 33 from Kells, and 23 from Dunshaughlin.

As stated in our last Annual Report the Unions of Croom, Kilmallock, Limerick, Listowel, Newcastle, and Rathkeale were combined by an Order, dated the 27th of February, 1893, for the purpose of forming a district school for the children of the Workhouses of those Unions. Since then the proceedings for establishing the school have been in progress. The School Board has been formed, and has obtained the disused workhouse premises at Glin, in which the necessary structural alterations are being made to adapt those buildings to the requirements of the school. It is expected that the alterations will soon be completed, and that the school will be opened during the present year.

21. Poor relief expenditure.

We now proceed to the statistics arising out of the accounts of the unions for the year ended the 29th of September, 1893, and we deal in the first place with poor relief expenditure.

Year ended 29th September	Net Annual value	Poor Rate lodged.	Poor Relief Expenditure during year.						Numbers relieved during year.
			In-Maintenance and Clothing.	Out-door Relief.	Cost of Relief in Blind and Deaf and Dumb Institutions, and of patients in Extern Hospitals.	Salaries and Rations of Officers.	All other Expenditure.	Total Poor Relief Expenditure.	In workhouses.	Out-door.	In Blind and Deaf and Dumb Institutions.	Total number relieved.

Decrease,	—	—	20,184	8,188	—	—	—	11,282	—	9,973	—	1,385

From the above table it will be seen that there was a decrease of £20,184 in "in-maintenance and clothing," and of £8,188 in "out-door relief," while there was an increase of £984 in the "cost of relief in blind and deaf and dumb institutions, and of patients in extern hospitals," of £333 in "salaries and rations of officers," and of £15,773 in "all other poor relief expenditure," making a net decrease of £11,282 in the expenditure on the relief of the poor during the year 1893 as compared with 1892.

The decrease in the cost of in-maintenance and clothing is attributable to the low price of provisions, &c., during the year.

It will thus be seen that while the total expenditure for poor relief, medical relief, burial-grounds, sanitary measures, superannuation, payments under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, payments under the National School Teachers Act and all other purposes was, in 1892, £1,406,261, the expenditure in 1893 was £1,397,032.

24. Towns Improvement (Ireland) Act, 1854.

We stated in our last report that we had under consideration an application of certain inhabitants of the City of Waterford to have the provisions of the Towns Improvement (Ireland) Act, 1854, carried into effect in that city. On the 25th of May last the necessary "Orders and Directions" were issued, in pursuance of section 4 of the Act, for the convening of a meeting for the purpose of considering the carrying of the Act into execution, but the determination of the meeting was not transmitted to us within the time prescribed by the Act.

In the case of an application of the Town Commissioners of Killarney, which was also under our consideration, for consent to the extension of the boundaries of the Town, we directed a local inquiry to be held into the matter by two of our Inspectors. Having duly considered their report and the minutes of evidence taken at the inquiry we did not think that it had been shown that the extension of the boundaries of the town proposed by the Commissioners was necessary, and we accordingly declined to consent to the proposal.

25. MEDICAL CHARITIES ACT, AND VACCINATION ACTS.

We next submit to your Excellency a report of the proceedings under these Acts for the year ended the 30th of September, 1893.

The annexed table exhibits, in the usual form, the fluctuations in the number of cases in which medical relief was afforded under the Medical Charities Act during each of the last twelve years ended on the 30th of September, for each Province and for the whole of Ireland.

Compared with the year ended in 1892 it will be seen that last year there was in Munster, Leinster, and Connaught an increase, and in Ulster a decrease, in the number of cases prescribed for at the dispensaries, while there was a decrease in each of the Provinces in the number of those who were attended at their own houses.

The net increase in the number of cases treated at dispensaries was 9,434, and the decrease in the number of those attended at their own homes 20,387, making a net decrease of 10,953 in the total number of cases in which medical relief was afforded by the medical officers of Dispensary Districts.

Summary of the number of cases of medical relief under the Medical Charities Act.

28. Vaccine Department.

During the year ended the 31st of March last, 3,520 applications for lymph were received from medical officers of workhouses, dispensaries, and other public institutions, from military medical officers, and from private practitioners, and 17,699 points, and 4,322 tubes charged with lymph were distributed. During the same period 1,512 vaccinations were performed at the stations in Sackville-street and York-street, Dublin.

29. Small-pox.

During the past year small-pox has, on several occasions and in localities widely apart, been introduced into Ireland from places in the United Kingdom, and we are glad to record that the prompt and effective measures adopted by Irish Sanitary Authorities have in every instance been successful in arresting the spread of the disease. Irish Sanitary Authorities have spared no trouble or expense in dealing with the serious danger to which their districts were thus suddenly exposed.

The number of deaths in workhouses from small-pox and the number of cases of the disease treated by dispensary medical officers in each of the last thirty years are given in the following table:—

Deaths in workhouses from small-pox, and number of cases of small-pox treated by dispensary medical officers.

The following table shows the number of cases of fever reported as attended by the medical officers of dispensary districts in each year ended on the 30th of September during the last twenty-nine years.

The number of cases attended in 1893 was greater than in 1892 by 213, and we regret to have to add that we have observed indications of the increasing prevalence of typhus fever since the period covered by the returns for 1893.

31. Scarlet Fever.

There were 1,516 cases of scarlet fever treated by medical officers of dispensary districts in 1893 as compared with 1,210 cases in 1892, being an increase of 306.

32. Cholera.

During the greater part of the past year our Medical Inspectors suspended the usual periodical inspections of their districts in order that all their time not occupied in holding formal inquiries might be devoted to advising Sanitary Authorities and their officers respecting the preparations necessary in view of the possibility of cholera extending to this portion of the United Kingdom. We also, during seven months, had the advantage of the temporary services of Dr. D. Edgar Flinn who assisted in the discharge of this important duty. Cholera although it obtained a footing in England fortunately did not extend to Ireland; and, while we gladly acknowledge the efforts made by many local authorities to prepare their districts against a formidable danger, we are sensible of the fact that in some localities much still remains to be accomplished in the direction of improved water supplies, efficient drainage and sewerage, the removal of nuisances, and the provision of adequate hospital accommodation and nursing arrangements.

33. Influenza.

In our report of 1890 we dealt with the severe epidemic of influenza which prevailed during the winter of 1889-90. Since then influenza has lingered in this part of the Kingdom, and, during each winter, has been severely felt in many localities. During the winter of 1893–94, the disease again appeared, but we are able to report that although widespread it has not been characterized by anything approaching the severity of the visitation of 1889–90.

34. Medical Charities, &c., Expenditure.

In addition to the foregoing, we received a petition from the Corporation of the City of Dublin for a Provisional Order to empower them to put in force the provisions of the Lands Clauses Acts with reference to the purchase and taking of lands, otherwise than by agreement, for the purpose of obtaining a supply of water for their district from Lough Dan, in connection with, and in addition and supplemental to, their existing waterworks. The Corporation, however, subsequently intimated their intention of not proceeding further with the scheme.

We received also a petition from the Naas Rural Sanitary Authority praying for compulsory powers of purchase of land for a sewage farm at Kildare. The necessary local inquiry into the matter of the petition was opened at Kildare on the 10th of February last, but the Sanitary Authority decided to abandon the proposal.

We mentioned in our last Report that we had under consideration an application of the Athlone Urban Sanitary Authority for a Provisional Order to transfer to them from the Grand Juries of the counties of Roscommon and Westmeath the jurisdiction with respect to roads, bridges, footpaths, and public works within the town. The Grand Jury of the county of Westmeath consented to the making of the proposed Order, but the Grand Jury of the county of Roscommon refused to give their consent except on conditions which the Urban Authority would not accept; and we have decided, in exercise of the powers given to us by the 206th section of the Public Health Act, to make the Order sought for, notwithstanding the refusal of the county Roscommon Grand Jury to consent to it. We shall make a special report to Parliament, in pursuance of the requirements of the section referred to, stating the grounds on which we made such Order.

37. The Irish Education Acts, 1892 and 1893.

Under the 17th section of the Irish Education Act, 55 & 56 Vict., ch. 42, which received the Royal Assent on the 27th of June, 1892, power is given to acquire land compulsorily as a site for a National School or for the residence of a teacher of a National School. This Act was amended by the Act, 56 & 57 Vict., ch. 41, which became law on the 12th of September, 1893. In pursuance of these two enactments, persons approved of by the Commissioners of National Education as trustees may obtain from us a Provisional Order empowering them to put in force the provisions of the Lands Clauses Acts for the purpose of taking, otherwise than by agreement, land required for either of the objects mentioned. Since the passing of the amending Act referred to, we have received a petition with respect to obtaining a site required for a teacher's residence at Ballinvriskig, in the Cork Union, but proof has not yet been furnished that the preliminaries which must precede the application for the Order have been complied with.

40. Sewerage and Water supply.

Our report upon Public Health is continued from the last annual Report. Details were given therein of the operations in regard to sewerage and water-supply under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1878, in continuation of the detail of proceedings under the Act of 1874; the extent of those operations is still in some degree measured in rural sanitary districts by the number of the Orders under seal fixing the areas of charge, and the loans borrowed for these purposes through the Public Works Commissioners.

The number of such Orders issued each year since 1875-6 is shown in the following table:—

Year.	Number of Orders issued declaring areas of charge for sanitary expenses.
1876-7, . .	89
1877-8, . .	122
1878-9, . .	117
1879-80, . .	126

1890-1, . .	49
1891-2, . .	49
1892-3, . .	48
1893-4, . .	89
Total, . .	1,568

It will be seen from the foregoing that 1,568 Orders fixing areas of charge for sewerage or water-supply, or both, have been issued during the last nineteen years, the number for the year from the 26th of March, 1893, to the 25th of March, 1894, being 89, which were issued to the Guardians of 48 unions.

The above table relates only to rural sanitary districts. In urban districts all sanitary expenses are chargeable upon funds levied from the whole district.

41. Loans.

In both urban and rural sanitary districts a considerable part of the expenditure on sewerage, water-supply, and other local improvements is defrayed by means of loans to the sanitary authorities which we sanction in pursuance of section 237 of the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878.

In the eighteen years ended the 31st of March, 1893, loans under the Sanitary Acts were sanctioned as follows:—

Following the course adopted in previous Reports, we now give tables showing what has been done by sanitary authorities under the improvement schemes authorized, and what is proposed to be done under further improvement schemes.

Table A shows that out of the 12,937 houses authorized, 10,352 have been provided, of which 10,272 are actually let, and that 640 others are at present in progress or contracted for. The aggregate monthly rent of the cottages built in each union and the amount of such rent in arrear are also shown.

Table B shows that further improvement schemes have been or are, we understand, about to be submitted to us, embracing 2,738 cottages at an estimated cost of £362,966.

43. Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890.

PART I.

The Corporation of Belfast, in continuation of their proceedings under Part I. of the Act, as recorded in our last report, have since submitted for approval a scheme for the purpose of providing new dwellings for the accommodation of persons belonging to the labouring classes to be displaced under the Improvement Scheme made under the Local Government Board (Ireland) Provisional Order Confirmation (No. 3) Act, 1892, 55 & 56 Vic., ch. ccx. A local inquiry was held into the sufficiency of the scheme, and deeming it adequate we signified our approval thereof

The Provisional Order granted to the Corporation of Dublin, for the improvement of the "White's Lane area," to which we referred in paragraph 38 of our last report, was duly confirmed by Parliament; and the scheme submitted by the Corporation, for the purpose of providing new dwellings for the accommodation of persons belonging to the labouring classes to be displaced under the Improvement Scheme, was approved of by us after a local inquiry had been instituted as to its sufficiency. A loan of £5,000 has been sanctioned for the acquisition of the property.

PART III.

We sanctioned a loan of £1,100 to the Corporation of Limerick, and a sum of £1,400 to the Pembroke Township Commissioners, for the erection of working class lodging houses under Part III. of the Act. These amounts, added to £100,421 19*s.* 8*d.* previously sanctioned by us for such purposes, make a total of £102,921 19*s.* 8*d.* to the present date.

44. Departmental Arrangements.

In view of the prevalence of Cholera on the Continent and the consequent danger of its introduction into this country, we deemed it advisable to strengthen, temporarily, our staff of Medical Inspectors; and we, accordingly, appointed Dr. D. Edgar Flinn, F.R.C.S.I., whose services are already referred to in paragraph 32, to act as Medical Inspector from August, 1893, to the 31st of March, 1894.

We have no changes in regard to the permanent staff of the Department to report to your Excellency.

We have the honour to be

Your Excellency's obedient servants,

John Morley.
George Morris.
D. Harrel.
F. MacCabe.
H. A. Robinson.

said Act prescribed; and the Local Government Board have received from the Commissioners of National Education a requisition to provide, in the year 1893–94, a sum equal to one-third of such full amount aforesaid:

And Whereas it is by the said Act further enacted that upon the receipt of every such estimate the Local Government Board shall by an Order under their Seal assess upon each contributory union a sum equal to one-third of the full amount payable as results fees in respect of pupils attending the National Schools in such contributory union, and shall transmit a copy of such Order to the guardians and likewise to the treasurer of such contributory union, stating the amount so assessed on such contributory union:

And Whereas it is by the said Act further enacted that forthwith on the receipt of such Order by the treasurer of any contributory union he shall, out of the funds then lying in his hands to the credit of the guardians of such union, or, if there shall be then no sufficient assets, out of the moneys next received by him and placed to the credit of such guardians, pay over the amount so assessed on such contributory union to the Bank of Ireland, to be there placed to the credit of the Commissioners of Education to a separate account, to be entitled "The Results Fees Account"; and that the guardians of such contributory union shall in their account with the electoral divisions of such contributory union debit each electoral division with its proportion of the said amount according to the net annual value for the time being of the property rateable to the rates for the relief of the destitute poor in each such division:

And Whereas it is provided by the said Act that if in any financial year the sum provided by the Local Government Board in respect of any contributory union exceeds the amount required for the purposes of the Act in such year in respect of such contributory union, such overplus shall be carried to the credit of the next following financial year, and in such last-mentioned year only such sum shall be raised by assessment on such contributory union as shall be necessary in addition thereto to make up the sum which would in the ordinary course under the said Act be required to be provided by the Local Government Board in respect of such contributory union in such next following year:

And Whereas we have received from the Commissioners of National Education a statement of the surplus of previous assessments, as set forth in the fourth column of the Schedule hereto:

Now Therefore, in pursuance of the powers vested in us by the said Act, We do hereby assess upon each of the unions named in the first column of the Schedule hereto the amount set opposite to its name in the fifth column, such sum being equal to one-third of such full amount payable as Results Fees as aforesaid by such union as set forth in the second column of the said Schedule, less the amount of surplus of previous assessments as set forth in the fourth column.

To the Guardians of the Poor of the several Poor Law Unions in Ireland; to the Clerks and Collectors of Poor Rates of the said Unions; and to all other persons whom it may concern:

Whereas by Section 1, Sub sections 1 and 2 of the Parliamentary Registration Expenses (Ireland) Act, 1890, it is enacted that:—

(1) The clerks and collectors of poor rates of the several poor law unions in Ireland shall be paid for their services and for expenses incurred by them in execution of the duties required to be discharged by them, respectively, in carrying into effect the provisions of the Representation of the People Acts as that expression is defined in section eight of the Representation of the People Act, 1884, for which payment is not provided by the said Acts.

(2.) The Local Government Board for Ireland may from time to time make orders, and when made, revoke, alter, or amend the same, and make new orders nstead of any orders revoked, fixing a scale according to which the payment for such services and expenses shall be made.

And Whereas We, the Local Government Board for Ireland, by an Order under Our Seal bearing date the Tenth day of February, 1891, did fix a scale according to which the payment for the services and expenses aforesaid should be made:

And Whereas it is expedient to revoke the said Order and to fix the scale hereinafter set forth in substitution for the scale in the said Order contained:

Now Therefore We, the Local Government Board for Ireland, do hereby revoke our said Order of the Tenth day of February, 1891, and direct that the scale according to which the Clerks and Collectors of Poor Rates of the several Poor Law Unions in Ireland shall henceforth be paid for their services and for expenses incurred by them in execution of their said duties, respectively, shall be as follows, viz.:—

Scale.

2. Each Collector of Poor Rates shall be paid at the rate of Twelve Shillings for each hundred ratings in the district for which he is Collector; together with a sum of Seven Shillings and Sixpence for each day on which he may necessarily be in attendance at the Revision Courts in execution of his duties aforesaid.

3. In case any Clerk of a Union, Deputy, or Collector shall attend at more than one Revision Court on the same day, one payment only on the scale aforesaid, shall be made in respect of the services of such Officer for that day.

Provided, that the Clerks and Collectors of Poor Rates of the North and South Dublin Unions shall receive no such payment in respect of ratings comprised within the Municipal District of Dublin.

No. 3.—GENERAL ORDER AMENDING THE WORKHOUSE RULES.

To the GUARDIANS of the POOR of the several UNIONS named in the Schedule hereunto annexed, and the OFFICERS of the WORKHOUSES of such UNIONS; and to all others whom it may concern:

WHEREAS, in exercise of the powers vested in them by an Act passed in the second year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act for the more effectual Relief of the destitute Poor in Ireland," the Commissioners for administering the Laws for Relief of the Poor in Ireland did, by a General Order under their Seal bearing date the Fifth day of February, 1849, prescribe Rules and Regulations for regulating the management of Workhouses in Ireland and the duties of Workhouse Officers:

AND WHEREAS by a General Order under our Seal bearing date the Twenty-second day of October, 1890 (hereinafter referred to as the amending Order), We, the Local Government Board for Ireland, did repeal the regulations contained in Article 20 of the said first-mentioned General Order and make further regulations in lieu thereof:

AND WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the regulations contained in the amending Order and further to amend the said General Order of the Fifth day of February, 1849:

Now Therefore, in exercise of the powers vested in Us, We, the Local Government Board for Ireland, do hereby order and direct that the following regulations shall be substituted for these contained in the amending Order, namely:—

Article I. No pauper inmate of any workhouse shall have or consume any tobacco, or any spirituous or fermented liquor, except where it is ordered in writing by the Medical Officer for any individual pauper of the sick, infirm, or lunatic classes, or for any pauper engaged at work of an offensive nature which may render tobacco or a stimulant necessary for the preservation of his health. The Medical Officer shall set forth briefly in each case the reason for making such order, and his report on the subject shall be laid before the Board of Guardians at their next meeting.

Provided that tobacco or snuff may be supplied to the aged and infirm classes of workhouse inmates in any Union the Board of Guardians of which shall adopt a Resolution to that effect after fourteen days' notice of the intention to move such Resolution shall have been given to each member of the Board of Guardians—such previous notice to specify the quantity of tobacco, or snuff, proposed to be allowed to each inmate of the classes referred to.

Article II. Anything in the said General Order of the Fifth day of February, 1849, to the contrary notwithstanding, the Board of Guardians of any Union may from time to time, by Resolution, determine in what rooms and at what times smoking shall be allowed, and no pauper shall smoke in the Workhouse of such Union in any other room or at any other time than is so allowed.

II.—CIRCULARS.

No. 1.—Training Nurses in Workhouse Hospitals.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 3rd July, 1893.

Sir,

In connection with the Circulars which the Local Government Board for Ireland have addressed to each Sanitary Authority on the subject of precautions against Cholera the Board desire to draw the attention of Boards of Guardians to the assistance it may be in their power to give Sanitary Authorities in the event of this portion of the United Kingdom being visited by any formidable epidemic or infectious disease.

The Local Government Board have reason to believe that if any dangerous infectious disease should visit Ireland and become epidemic, the number of trained nurses would be found inadequate to meet the demand for their services. In a few large cities and towns where there are communities of nursing sisters or other associations of trained nurses it is possible that a sufficient number might be available to meet an emergency, but the Local Government Board are satisfied that the supply of qualified nurses would fall far short of the applications for their services which would be likely to pour in from rural districts throughout the country.

Under these circumstances the Local Government Board think it well to suggest to Boards of Guardians that they might make use of the workhouse hospitals for the purpose of training nurses whose services would be available in the event of Cholera or other formidable infectious disease appearing within the Unions. It appears to the Local Government Board that the Guardians of each Union might select a limited number of suitable persons willing to enter their service for training, and the Local Government Board feel assured that if Boards of Guardians appointed a few young women as probationary assistant nurses in the hospital and fever wards of each workhouse the medical officers in charge and the regularly appointed nurses would be found willing to afford them such practical instruction in the nursing and care of the sick as would in some degree qualify them to attend the sick poor in any epidemic which might arise. The Guardians are aware that under Article 24 of the General Regulations they are empowered to appoint temporary assistants, and the Local Government Board will be prepared to sanction any reasonable expenditure undertaken in order to carry into effect the suggestion contained in this Circular.

The Local Government Board avail themselves of this opportunity to point out that they have frequently found it necessary to remonstrate with Boards of Guardians in respect of the selection of untrained persons for the responsible post of hospital nurse. The course now recommended to the notice of Boards of Guardians, if adopted, would have the advantage of providing in each Union a certain number of trained nurses who would probably become candidates for any vacancy which might arise amongst the permanent staff employed in each Union hospital.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union.

No. 2.—SCALE for the PAYMENT of CLERKS of UNIONS and COLLECTORS of POOR RATE for DUTIES under the REPRESENTATION of the PEOPLE ACTS.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 3rd October, 1893.

SIR,

I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to state that, in consequence of representations made by certain Boards of Guardians, the Board have decided to alter the scale fixed by their Order of the 10th of February, 1891, for the payment of Clerks of Unions and Poor Rate Collectors for duties under the Representation of the People Acts, and they have, accordingly, made an Order,* a copy of which is enclosed, revoking the Order referred to, and fixing a scale according to which the Clerks and Poor Rate Collectors shall henceforward be paid for their services, and for expenses incurred by them in execution of their duties under the Acts mentioned.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union.

No. 3.—Amendment of the Workhouse Rules.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 15th November, 1893.

Sir,

I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to forward, herewith, for the information of the Board of Guardians, a copy of an Order† which the Board have made amending the Regulations hitherto in force with regard to the use of tobacco by inmates of Workhouses.

The Guardians will observe that they are now authorized to give tobacco (or snuff) to inmates of the aged and infirm classes upon passing a resolution to that effect after due notice specifying the amount of either of these articles to be allowed to each person of the classes referred to. Where such a resolution has been passed, the Guardians should cause a list to be prepared of the inmates of the aged and infirm classes to whom tobacco (or snuff) may properly be given, and the Master should be directed to remove from this list the names of paupers quitting the Workhouse, and to add to it the names of those who may from time to time become entitled to receive these articles. All such alterations in the list should be reported to the Board of Guardians.

I am at the same time to call the Guardians' attention to the concluding paragraph of the accompanying Order, which amends the 31st Article of the Workhouse Rules, and empowers the Guardians, from time to time by resolution, to determine in what rooms and at what times smoking shall be allowed in the Workhouse, and directs that no pauper shall smoke in the Workhouse in any other room or at any other time than is so allowed.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union.

No. 4.—Classification of Workhouse Inmates.—Aged Married Couples.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 15th November, 1893.

Sir,

The Local Government Board for Ireland desire to inform the Board of Guardians that the fact has been brought under their notice that in recent years the Board of Supervision in Scotland upon application made to them have sanctioned the association by day and night of aged married couples in Poorhouses subject to the following rules and conditions :—

"(1) When any two persons, being husband and wife, shall be admitted into "the Poorhouse, it shall be lawful for the House Committee to permit, in their "discretion, such husband and wife to occupy the same apartment, provided (a) "that they both desire to do so; (b) that they are both above the age of sixty "years, and (c) that no other inmate is placed in the apartment so occupied.

"(2) Every such case shall be reported forthwith to the Board of Supervision.

"(3.) The sanction of the Board hereby given shall be held to be experi- "mental only, and the House Committee are required to report to the Board "at the end of twelve months from this date as to the effect of its operation, "especially whether it has impaired the efficacy of the Poorhouse test or has "interfered with the discipline of the Poorhouse."

In England provision is made in this respect under 10 and 11 Vic., cap. 109, section 23.

The Local Government Board for Ireland will be prepared to consider any proposal to permit a similar indulgence in Workhouses in this country, subject to like conditions, and provided that a Board of Guardians submitting such a proposal shall carry out such alterations in the Workhouse buildings as may be necessary to provide separate apartments for aged married couples to the satisfaction of the Local Government Board before their sanction to the arrangement is finally given.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union.

No. 5.—DIETARY in WORKHOUSES.

Local Government Board,
SIR, Dublin, 21st November, 1893.

The Local Government Board for Ireland desire to inform the Board of Guardians that their attention has been directed to the differences which exist between the scales of dietary for healthy inmates in force in Irish and in English and Scotch Workhouses. The Board have found on comparing the dietaries in use in selected Unions in the three countries that those authorized in England and Scotland are generally better, more varied, and more palatable than the dietaries allowed in this country. This statement, however, does not apply to the Hospital diets, which, as the Guardians are aware, are subject to the control of the Medical Officer in each Workhouse.

The Board have deemed it expedient to bring this matter under the notice of the Guardians, so that, if they desire it, steps may be taken to secure a somewhat more liberal diet for Workhouse inmates, especially those of the aged and infirm classes. To aid the Board of Guardians in coming to a decision, the Board have caused to be printed in the schedule to this circular copies of the diet scales in use in three English and in three Scotch Workhouses, and they suggest that the Guardians should, in consultation with their Medical Officer, take the subject into consideration, and furnish the Local Government Board with their views as to the desirability of any alteration in the present dietary.

I am to add that the Board will consider favourably any proposal made by the Guardians to grant an extra allowance of tea to such female inmates as the Board of Guardians and their Medical Officer may consider would be benefited thereby.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary

To the Clerk of each Union.

No. 6.—Lunatics Dying in Workhouses.—Notice to Coroner.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 11th December, 1893.

Sir,—I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to state, for the information of the Board of Guardians, that their attention has been drawn to the practice which prevails in District Lunatic Asylums of notifying to the Coroner the death of any lunatic inmate. The Board consider it desirable that a similar course should be observed with regard to lunatics dying in Workhouses, and they have, therefore, to request that the Guardians will be so good as to direct that in future a notification shall be sent to the Coroner of the death of any inmate of the Workhouse who, at the time of decease, is classed as a lunatic.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union.

No. 7.—National School Teachers (Ireland) Act, 1875.

Local Government Board,
Sir, Dublin, 30th December, 1893.

In pursuance of the 4th Section of "The National School Teachers (Ireland) Act, 1875," the Local Government Board for Ireland transmit to you, herewith, to be laid before the Board of Guardians of Union, the notice which they are required by that section to transmit, on or before the 1st day of January, to the Guardians of every union which shall not at such time be a contributory union within the meaning of the Act.

The Notice now transmitted, as in the case of the notice which was transmitted on the 30th December, 1892, requires the Guardians within Forty days from the receipt thereof to inform the Local Government Board whether, for the purpose of increasing the remuneration of the teachers of National Schools within the union, they are willing to make their union a contributory union within the meaning of the Act, and the Guardians will observe therefore that by the present notice they are called upon, in pursuance of the requirement of the Act, to decide whether they will become contributory for the year 1894–95, (that is for the year commencing on the 1st April next), and subsequent years, until the resolution to contribute be legally revoked.

The Board forwarded with their circular of the 30th August, 1875, a copy of the Act, and of various other documents relating to this subject, and they desire to refer the Board of Guardians to that circular and the documents which accompanied it for any information which they may require before replying to the enclosed notice.

The Board have to add that the Commissioners of National Education have furnished them with an estimate of the probable amount which will be payable by the Guardians of the several unions in results fees to teachers of National Schools within the respective unions for the year 1894–95, and the liability which, according to this estimate, the Guardians will incur by making their union a contributory one is not expected to exceed £

In the event of the Guardians resolving to become a contributory union within the meaning of the Act, you should, immediately upon the passing of such resolution, forward a copy of the same signed by the Chairman as well as by yourself to the Commissioners of National Education, and to the Local Government Board, in accordance with the terms of Section 6 of the Act.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary.

To the Clerk, —— Union.

ENCLOSURE to the FOREGOING.

NOTICE.

In pursuance of Section 4 of "The National School Teachers (Ireland) Act, 1875," 38 and 39 Vic., c. 96.

The Guardians of union are hereby required, within forty days after the receipt hereof, to inform the Local Government Board for Ireland whether, for the purpose of increasing the remuneration of the teachers of National Schools within the union, they are willing to become a contributory union within the meaning of "The National School Teachers (Ireland) Act," (38 and 39 Vic., c. 96).

By Order of the Board,

THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary.

Sir,—I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to forward, herewith, for the information of the Board of Guardians, a copy of an Order* made by them on the 29th ultimo reducing the rating qualification for the office of Guardian to £8 for every Electoral Division in Ireland in which the qualification was previously higher than that amount.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

No. 9.—Rate Books.—Separate Valuation of Land and Buildings.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 15th February, 1894.

Sir,—I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to state, for the information of Boards of Guardians, that they have been informed by the Commissioner of Valuation that valuation lists showing the value of land and of buildings in separate columns are being issued gradually to the Unions throughout Ireland. A number of Unions will be supplied with this form during the present year; at next revision the new form will be supplied to additional Unions, and in 1896 the remaining Unions in Ireland will be so supplied.

In view of this intimation the Board have to point out that in any case in which the valuation list gives the valuations of land and buildings separately the word "land" and the description of the buildings should be entered on separate lines in the column for the "description of property rated, &c.," and the valuation of those hereditaments should be entered opposite to them, respectively, on separate lines, also, in the column headed "net annual value."

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union

No. 2.—Vaccination.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 21st March, 1894.

Sir,

The Local Government Board for Ireland have observed from the reports of Medical Officers of Dispensary Districts that during the quarter ended the 31st of December last Vaccination has been postponed in many parts of Ireland owing to the presence of measles or influenza, and, in some instances, on account of unfavourable weather. During the same period smallpox has been present in centres of population throughout England, and some cases have already been introduced into Ireland. Smallpox has not, as yet, disappeared from England, and, as large numbers of children whose age exceeds three months remain in Ireland unprotected by Vaccination, the Local Government Board request that you will devote particular attention to the subject of Vaccination during the spring and early summer months.

The Local Government Board avail themselves of this opportunity for again impressing on you, as a public vaccinator, the importance of not certifying any child to be insusceptible until after three separate attempts shall have been made to vaccinate with fresh lymph, from arm to arm.

The attention of the Local Government Board has been drawn to the practice which prevails in some parts of the country of using "shields" to protect the recently vaccinated arms of children. The Board trust that if shields are used in your district you will, as far as possible, discourage their employment. It is found that if the tapes securing the shield are tightened to keep the appliance in situ they obstruct the circulation to a sufficient extent to interfere with the natural development and progress of the vesicles, and if they are loosely applied the shield frequently wounds the vesicles, and, from the irritation caused, increases inflammatory action in the areola. Shields are open to the further grave objection that as they are frequently transferred from child to child they become the carriers of septic and other germs, leading to erysipelatous inflammation and blood poisoning. The Local Government Board consider that the old method of securing the sleeve of the child's dress by a ribbon or tape so as to leave the vaccinated spots uncovered is to be preferred to the use of any form of shield.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To each Medical Officer of a Dispensary District.

No. 3.—Committees of Management of Dispensary Districts.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 22nd March, 1894.

Sir,

The Local Government Board for Ireland desire to call your attention to the circular of the Poor Law Commissioners dated the 21st of March, 1862, relating to the annual appointment of dispensary committees and wardens, and to the extracts from previous circulars appended thereto, and they request that you will take the necessary steps, as pointed out in the circular referred to, to place before the Board of Guardians, after the annual election of guardians, a correct list of the members of the Board entitled under section 7 of the Medical Charities Act (14 & 15 Vic., Cap. 68) to be members of the respective dispensary committees in the union. The Guardians should then, in each case in which it may be necessary to do so, elect a sufficient number of ratepayers possessing the qualifications prescribed by the section mentioned, so that the number of members of each committee shall amount to the number authorised by sealed Order.

This ought to be done by resolution and recorded on the minutes.

If it should appear from the Returning Officer's return of the election that there are any vacancies in the office of guardian, the Board of Guardians should elect only such a number of qualified ratepayers to serve on the dispensary committees as would be necessary if the number of guardians were complete, so that the persons who may be returned to supply the vacancies may become members of the respective committees upon which they may be qualified and entitled to act.

As soon as the committee shall have been completed for any dispensary district, you should give notice to each member thereof of the day upon which the election of chairman and vice-chairman and other honorary officers for the year will take place, in accordance with articles 6 & 7 of the Dispensary Regulations of 3rd November, 1885.

The Board enclose three copies of a form for a return of officers of the several dispensary committees in the union to enable you to make the return in duplicate to this office and to retain a copy for the use of the Board of Guardians, and they request that you will procure the necessary information with the least possible delay and then forward the return to this office.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Clerk of each Union.

I.—ORDERS.

II.—CIRCULARS.

No 1.—Factory and Workshop Acts.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 13th June, 1893.

Sir,

Adverting to their letter of the 6th of September last forwarding extracts from the Factory and Workshop Acts, 1878-91, containing certain provisions of those Acts which affect Sanitary Authorities in Ireland, I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to draw the attention of the Sanitary authority to the duties devolving upon them under the provisions referred to.

Important duties are placed upon Sanitary Authorities by the Acts mentioned in regard to the sanitary condition of factories, workshops, and bakehouses, and, whilst reminding Sanitary Authorities of their duties and powers under each Act, the Board desire to call particular attention to the provisions contained in the Act of 1891 respecting the sanitary condition of workshops.

It is provided by Section 3 (2) of the Act of 1891 that, for the purpose of their duties with respect to workshops, Sanitary Authorities and their officers shall, without prejudice to their other powers, have all such powers of entry, inspection, taking legal proceedings or otherwise, as an Inspector of Factories has under the Act of 1878.

Section 4 of the Act of 1891 provides that workshops and workplaces shall be kept free from effluvia arising from any drain, water closet, earth closet, privy, urinal, or other nuisance, and unless so kept shall be deemed to be a nuisance liable to be dealt with summarily under the law relating to Public Health, and, further, provides that where on the certificate of a Medical Officer of Health, or Inspector of Nuisances, it appears to any Sanitary Authority that the limewashing, cleansing, or purifying of a workshop or of any part thereof is necessary for the health of the persons employed therein, the Sanitary Authority shall give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of the workshop to limewash, cleanse, or purify the same, or part thereof, as the case may require. If the person to whom notice is so given fails to comply therewith within the time therein specified, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding ten shillings for every day during which he continues to make default, and the Sanitary Authority may, if they think fit, cause the workshop or part to be limewashed, cleansed, or purified, and may recover in a summary manner the expenses incurred by them in so doing from the person in default.

Section 4 of the Act of 1878 provides that where it appears to an Inspector of Factories that any act, neglect, or default in relation to any drain, water closet, earth closet, privy, ashpit, water-supply, nuisance, or other matter in a factory or workshop is punishable or remediable under the law relating to public health, but not under that Act, the Inspector shall give notice in writing of such act, neglect, or default to the Sanitary Authority in whose district the factory or workshop is situate, and it shall be the duty of the Sanitary Authority to make such inquiry into the subject of the notice, and take such action thereon, as they may consider proper for the purpose of enforcing the law. For the purposes of this Section the Inspector of Factories may take with him into the factory or workshop a Medical Officer of Health, Inspector of Nuisances, or other officer of the Sanitary Authority. Section 2 (1) of the Act of 1891 applies this enactment to workshops conducted on the system of not employing any child, young person, or woman therein, and also to laundries.

Section 2 (2) of the Act of 1891 provides that where an Inspector of Factories has given notice to the Sanitary Authority under Section 4 of the Act of 1878 as amended by the Act of 1891, and proceedings are not taken within a reasonable time for punishing or remedying the act, neglect, or default, the Inspector may take the like proceedings for punishing or remedying the same as the Sanitary Authority might have taken, and shall be entitled to recover from the Sanitary Authority all such expenses in and about the proceedings as the Inspector incurs and are not recovered from any other person and have not been incurred in any unsuccessful proceedings.

By Section 1 of the Act of 1891 the Secretary of State is empowered in cases in which he is satfiised that the provisions of the law relating to public health as to effluvia arising from any drain, privy, or other nuisance, or with respect to cleanliness, ventilation, overcrowding, or limewashing are not observed in any workshops or class of workshops (including workshops conducted on the system of not employing any child, young person, or woman therein) or laundries, he may, if he thinks fit, by order, authorize and direct an Inspector of Factories to take, during such period as may be mentioned in the order, such steps as appear necessary or proper for enforcing the said provisions. An Inspector so authorized will have the same powers of taking proceedings and of recovering the expenses from the Sanitary Authority as those possessed by an Inspector under the provisions of Section 2 (2) of the Act which are mentioned above. It will be observed that this Section applies to laundries as well as to workshops.

Section 75 of the Act of 1878 (which requires notice to be given to an Inspector of Factories of the occupation of a factory) is applied to workshops by Section 26 of the Act of 1891, and the last-mentioned section provides that on receiving notice of the occupation of a workshop the Inspector of Factories shall forthwith forward the notice to the Sanitary Authority of the district in which the workshop is situate.

If any child, young person, or woman, as defined in Section 96 of the Act of 1878, is employed in a workshop, and the Medical Officer of the Sanitary Authority becomes aware thereof, Sub-Section 3 of Section 3 of the Act of 1891 directs that he shall, forthwith, give notice thereof to the Factory Inspector of the district.

A factory or workshop in which there is a contravention of any requirement made under the Act of 1891 shall be deemed not to be kept in conformity with the Act of 1878, and it will be seen from Section 81 of the last-mentioned Act that in such a case the occupier of the factory or workshop would be liable to a fine not exceeding ten pounds.

In addition to the clauses above adverted to the Act of 1891 contains other important provisions including provisions against fire in factories and some amendments of the previous Acts.

The Board trust that every effort will be made by the Sanitary Authority to ensure that their duties under the Act of 1891, as well as those under the Acts of 1878 and 1883, shall be satisfactorily discharged.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary.

To the Executive Sanitary Officer of each
Sanitary Authority, Urban and Rural.

CHOLERA.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 30th June, 1893.

SIR,

I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to forward, herewith, for the information of the Sanitary Authority, a copy of the Cholera Hospitals (Ireland) Act, 1893 (56 Vic., cap. 13), which received the Royal Assent on the 9th inst.

The Sanitary Authority will observe that the Act enables them, when an Order in Council has been published in the Dublin Gazette declaring that a case of Asiatic Cholera has occurred in Ireland, to take possession of any site within or contiguous to their district not exceeding two statute acres, subject to the exceptions mentioned in section 3 of the Act, for the purpose of erecting thereon a temporary hospital, provided they shall have first obtained the permission in writing of the Local Government Board specifying such site, and shall have given the prescribed notice.

The 4th section of the Act directs the manner in which the amount of rent and compensation to the owner or occupier of the land shall be determined; and it is enacted in the 5th section that within two months after it has been certified to the Sanitary Authority by the Medical Officers of Health of the Sanitary District that Cholera has ceased to exist within the district, and that there is no longer any occasion for the temporary hospital, the Sanitary Authority shall remove the same and all foundations, débris, and other materials, and restore the surface of the ground to the same state, so far as may be possible, in which it was found by them on taking possession, and shall deliver up the possession of the land so taken to the person in whose occupation it was immediately prior to the taking possession thereof.

The Board invite the attention of the Sanitary Authority to the provisions of the Act, generally, and they trust that in the event of Cholera appearing in this country they will, if the local circumstances render it necessary, lose no time in availing themselves of the powers conferred on them.

The Act will expire on the 1st of May next.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Executive Sanitary Officer of each
Sanitary Authority, Urban and Rural.

No. 3.—Continuance of the Cholera Hospitals (Ireland) Act, 1893, until the 31st of December, 1894.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 30th January, 1894.

Sir,—I am directed by the Local Government Board for Ireland to inform the Sanitary Authority that the Cholera Hospitals (Ireland) Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vic., cap. 13), a copy of which was forwarded to the Sanitary Authority with the Board's letter of the 30th of June last, is continued until the 31st day of December next by section 1 of the Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1893.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Executive Sanitary Officer
of each Sanitary Authority, Urban and Rural.

No. 4.—Cholera Precautions.—Forwarding to Sanitary Authorities a Copy of a Memorandum on the Subject of Cholera prepared by the Medical Officer of the Local Government Board, England.

Local Government Board,
Dublin, 4th July, 1893.

Sir,—The Local Government Board for Ireland forward, for the information of the Sanitary Authority, a copy of a Memorandum prepared by the Medical Officer of the Local Government Board, England, which has been communicated by that Board to Sanitary Authorities, on the subject of Cholera :—

"Asiatic Cholera first made its appearance in England in 1831-2. Including both the epidemic of that date and the occurrence of imported cases of the disease last Autumn, there have been seven occasions on which Cholera has found its way to this country.

"On the first four occasions ending with the outbreak of 1866, the disease succeeded in establishing itself amongst us in epidemic form. But on the three subsequent occasions it was practically limited to imported cases, and no extension took place.

"On five of the seven occasions referred to Cholera travelled across Russia to Baltic ports; and when the disease has followed this route it has commonly extended also to Continental ports on the North Sea and the British Channel. The disease has several times reached England from these ports, notably from Hamburg, and when this has been the case its incidence on this country has not been greatest during the first year of its European prevalence, but on recrudescence of the infection in the second or even the third year.

"The present Memorandum does not profess to suggest any explanation of this occurrence. Neither is it intended to imply that the same sequence of events will necessarily occur again. But it may be noted that whereas a considerable portion of the Summer of 1892 was taken up with the diffusion of Cholera across the Continent of Europe, the disease only reaching ports on the North Sea and British Channel in the month of August, recrudescence of the disease this year along the coast line of Western Europe may well occur at a date which would involve danger to this country during a longer term of our Summer and Autumn season than was the case last year.

"As yet there are happily no indications of any general recurrence of Cholera either in North Sea or Baltic Ports; but, notwithstanding this, occasional attacks of that disease have taken place during the present year in Hamburg and in the adjacent town of Altona. In the French Department of Morbihan, Province of Brittany, Cholera has hardly ceased to prevail since the beginning of November, 1892. The disease is still present there; over 200 deaths having been recorded from that Department during the months of March, April, and May of this year. The largest portion of this mortality has fallen on the port-town of Lorient. The disease has also shown itself at other points on the French coast.

"Having regard to these circumstances, it is important that the Sanitary Authorities of England and Wales should be prepared in advance to prevent extension of any Cholera that may be imported into their districts, and this duty devolves especially on the authorities of those districts into which cases of imported Cholera are most likely to make their way."

The Circulars addressed by the Local Government for Ireland to Sanitary Authorities during the past twelve months instructing them as to the principal points to be attended to for the defence of their districts against Cholera, together with the conferences which have taken place between them and their officers and the Medical Inspectors of the Board, have afforded Sanitary Authorities all the necessary information to enable them to prepare for any emergency likely to arise during the Summer and approaching Autumn, and the Local Government Board trust that no part of this country will be found unprepared to meet the possible approach of Cholera. In the event of Cholera obtaining a footing in other parts of the United Kingdom the Board apprehend that the extension of the disease to Ireland may occur without much warning; and it now seems to the Local Government Board to be the duty of Irish Sanitary Authorities to review the precautionary measures they have organized, and to satisfy themselves that, if the Local Government Board should find it necessary to issue Regulations under Section 149 of the Public Health Act of 1878, the machinery which has been provisionally arranged in each district will be found adequate for carrying into effect the provisions set forth in the section referred to. The Local Government Board consider that Sanitary Authorities will act wisely in keeping these provisions in view, and in perfecting in each district the arrangements necessary for the protection of the population.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. A. MOONEY, Secretary.

To the Executive Sanitary Officer
of each Sanitary Authority, Urban and Rural.

No. 5.—CHOLERA PRECAUTIONS.—CONDITION of SANITARY DISTRICTS.

Local Government Board, Dublin,
SIR, 20th September, 1893.

In view of the existence of Cholera in England, the Local Government Board for Ireland desire to draw the special attention of the Sanitary Authority to the circulars which the Board have addressed to them, from time to time, containing suggestions as to precautions which might with advantage be adopted, and reminding them of the duties devolving upon them as the authority entrusted with the administration of the Public Health Acts in their district.

The Board in their letter of the 4th of November last reminded Sanitary Authorities of the duty imposed upon them by section 108 of the "Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878," in relation to the regular inspection of their districts, and they would now wish to be informed by the Sanitary Authority whether, as the result of the systematic examination of their district required by the provisions of the section mentioned as well as of the action taken by them in accordance with the advice contained in the Board's circulars generally, the Sanitary Authority are fully satisfied as to the condition of the district committed to their charge, especially in regard to:—

1. The character of the water supply;
2. The sufficiency and suitability of hospital accommodation for the isolation and treatment of cholera cases;
3. The condition of the sewerage and drainage;
4. The absence of nuisances (as defined by sections 57 and 107 of the "Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878,"); and
5. The cleanliness of the dwellings occupied by the poorer classes.

The duty of the Sanitary Authority in relation to the points specifically mentioned above demands their earnest and sustained attention, and if, in respect of any one of them, the district is not adequately protected against the invasion of infectious disease, the Sanitary Authority should at once devote their attention to the remedying of any defects which may be found to exist.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Thos. A. Mooney, Secretary.

To the Executive Sanitary Officer
of each Sanitary Authority, Urban and Rural.

The Order further provides for the destruction by the Sanitary Authority, or their Medical Officer of Health, at the cost of the person having control over the same, of any bedding or clothing delivered overside or landed for the purpose of disinfection or destruction and not disinfected or destroyed by such person within the prescribed time.

The number of Paupers who died during the year was 6246, and Dependants 713.

Applications and Refusals.

The number of applicants who were refused Relief by Parochial Boards during the year was 3654. The number of applicants for Parochial aid who were offered Relief in the Poorhouse only, and who declined to accept that offer, and thus did not become chargeable to the Poor's Funds, was 6497.

(b) Receipt and Expenditure.

Receipt.

It appears from the returns made to us by Inspectors of Poor that the total amount of money received during the year ended 14th May 1894 was £1,019,935, of which the sum of £738,396 was raised by assessment, £236,919 was received from Grants in aid, and £44,620 was received from voluntary contributions, church collections, mortifications, and all other sources. In addition to the above, the sum of £284 was borrowed during the year on security of the rates.

The sum expended during the year ended 14th May 1894 for the Relief and Management of the Poor and on Buildings has been £939,003. In the preceding year the expenditure for the same purposes was £926,544. There has therefore been an increase in this expenditure of £12,459. During the past year £286 has been expended by Parochial Boards on account of Deputations. This sum which is principally charged against Management, is included in the total expenditure.

In addition to the above, the sum of £10,884 has been expended during the year in payment of feu-duties, interest, vaccination, &c., and £21,191 in payment of annual instalments of loans incurred for the erection, enlargement, alteration, or repair of Buildings, &c.

The total indebtedness of Parochial Boards at 14th May was £341,727, of which £314,757 was in respect of loans borrowed on security of the Rates, &c., and £26,970 was bank overdraft.

The cost of collection of Poor Rate amounted in the past year to £22,041, or 3·0 per cent. on the amount of assessment received.

The total cost of maintenance during the year was £706,913, of which about £393,899 was expended on maintenance of ordinary Poor receiving outdoor relief, £74,289 on ordinary Poor in Poorhouses, and £238,725 on maintenance of Pauper Lunatics.

The results for the past year continue to be on the whole satisfactory.

The following Table presents a comparative statement of the amounts received from Assessment, Grants, and Other Sources, and of the sums expended for the Relief and Management of the Poor for the last ten years, arranged under the different heads of receipt and expenditure, together with the rate of assessment per head of the estimated population and per £ of valuation :—

Church Collections. App. (B.) No. 8.

The whole sum derived from Church Collections in Assessed Parishes during the year ended 14th May 1894 as returned to us, was £41,772, of which £7766 is stated to have been expended on Relief of the Poor. Of this sum, however, £19 was handed over to the Parochial Boards, and expended by them. It would appear, therefore, that the sum of £7747 derived from Church Collections was actually applied by the Kirk-Sessions to the relief of persons in their respective parishes who required assistance. But these funds are generally employed to afford aid to persons who have fallen into temporary difficulties, with a view to prevent them from becoming chargeable to the parish as paupers; and it is probable that few of the persons so assisted have also been chargeable to the funds raised by assessment.

Expenditure on Relief and Management.

The following Table shows the Expenditure for the Relief and Management of the Poor (exclusive of the cost of buildings, repairs, and furnishings), the rate of expenditure per cent. and per £ of Valuation, and per head of Population, for each of the years from 1846–47 downwards to 1893–94 :—

* Management includes salaries of Inspectors and Collectors, office expenses, and Poorhouse Establishment Charges.

† The expenditure on buildings in 1894 is made up as follows :—Erection, enlargement, alteration and repairs not defrayed out of loans, £18,239 ; do. defrayed out of loans, £14,263 ; interest on Poorhouse Debt, £12,001.

(c) General Results.

An analysis of the Abstract of our Annual Returns just completed gives some interesting results. Diminution of Pauperism.

The number of paupers chargeable on 14th May last was 93,682, being paupers and 32,667 dependants,—a total increase of 61,015 pauperism during the year of 1678. Increase of Pauper Lunacy.

11 per cent. of the pauperism is attributable to the chargeability

* According to a Return prepared for the House of Commons at a later date, the valuation in 1874 was £18,920,714.

Poor Law.

of natives of England and Ireland, the total of that class being 10,274, of which 9098 were born in Ireland.

A further classification of the paupers, exclusive of their dependants, shows that of the 61,015 returned to us by the Inspectors, 49,653 were sane, and 11,362 were insane. Of the sane poor 21,071 or 43 per cent. were 65 years of age and upwards; 5608 or 11 per cent. were children who, being orphan, deserted, or separated from their parents, were chargeable to the parochial funds; the remaining 22,974 or 46 per cent. were between the ages of (say) 14 and 65.

It is satisfactory to observe that of the 5608 children brought up by the Parochial authorities no fewer than 4716, or 84 per cent., were boarded out,—34 per cent. sharing the homes of relatives, and 50 per cent. being under the care of strangers.

The long series of annual increases in the number of lunatic paupers is still unbroken, 360 having been added to the Parochial lists during the year, swelling the number to 11,362, and raising the proportion to 12 per cent. of the entire pauperism of the country.

Of the 93,682 paupers at 14th May, 17,911 or 19 per cent. were inmates of Poorhouses or Lunatic Asylums.

A comparison of the statistics of 1868—the year of highest recorded pauperism—with those of 1894, shows that the total pauperism has fallen from 136,231 to 93,682, a decrease of 42,549, or 31 per cent. During the same period the number of Ordinary Poor has been reduced from 130,441 to 82,320, being a decrease of 48,121, or at the rate of 37 per cent. The Lunatic Poor, on the other hand, have increased from 5790 to 11,362, being an increase of 5572 or 96 per cent.

Still more striking are the results when taken in relation to the population. In 1868 there was one poor person in every 24 of the estimated population; and in 1894 one poor person in every 44 of the estimated population,—or, taking into consideration the increased population, there has been a relative decrease of 45 per cent. of the paupers of all classes during the last 26 years.

In 1868 the ratio of Ordinary Poor to population was one in 25; in 1894 it is one in 50—which means that, taking the increase of population into account, there has been a relative decrease of Ordinary Poor of 50 per cent.

In 1868 the ratio of Lunatic Poor to population was one in 565; in 1894 it is one in 362. In other words, the increase of population being allowed for, the Lunatic Poor have relatively increased 56 per cent. since 1868.

The ratio of Lunatic Poor to the total number of Poor of all classes in 1868 was one in 23·5; in 1894 it is one in 8·2. That is, the proportion of Lunatic Poor to the Poor of all classes has increased 187 per cent. in 26 years.

To put the foregoing comparisons very briefly, we may say that for every 3 paupers who were actually chargeable in 1868, there are now 2; or, allowing for increased population, for every 11 paupers in 1868 there are now only 6. In the case of Lunatic Poor, for every 10 actually chargeable in 1868 there are now 19; or allowing for increased population, for every 2 chargeable in 1868 there are now 3.

Poor Law.

The results as regards expenditure are equally striking.

In 1868 the total expenditure on Relief and Management of all classes of poor was . .	£795,483
Of which on Lunatic Poor	113,676
Leaving as expenditure on ordinary Poor . .	£681,807
In 1894 the total expenditure on Relief and Management of all classes of poor was . . .	£894,500
Of which on Lunatic Poor	265,258
Leaving as expenditure on ordinary Poor . .	£629,242
So that the expenditure on ordinary Poor has fallen since 1868 by	£52,565
And the expenditure on Lunatic Poor has risen by .	151,582

Decrease of Expenditure on Ordinary Poor, and increase on Lunatic Poor.

The cost per head for Relief and Management of Ordinary Poor has increased since 1868 from £5, 4s. 6d. to £7, 12s. 10d., or 46 per cent., due mainly to increased rate of aliment; and the cost per head of Lunatic Poor has increased from £19, 12s. 8d. to £23, 6s. 11d., or at the rate of 19 per cent.

The average cost per head for Relief and Management of Poor of all classes has increased since 1868 from £5, 16s. 9d. to £9,11s. 0d., or at the rate of 64 per cent.

Poor-houses.

The number of Parishes that have Poorhouses, either singly or in combination, is 480, having an aggregate population of 3,205,513, according to the census of 1891. There are 66 Poorhouses at present in operation, the accommodation in which is sufficient for 15,360 inmates. The population of the Parishes that possess a right, in terms of the 65th section of the Statute, to send paupers to the Poorhouses belonging to other Parishes, is 714,660. The total population of the Parishes to which Poorhouse accommodation is thus at present available amounts to 3,920,173. The total population of the Parishes to which Poorhouse accommodation is still not available is 105,474. The Tables showing the number of Poorhouses in operation, and the Parishes forming the various Poorhouse Combinations in Scotland, are printed in the Appendix. These Tables indicate the number of inmates of Poorhouses as at 1st January and 1st July last; the number who were receiving indoor relief during the half-years ended 31st December 1893 and 30th June 1894; the number of those on the Sick-List, as well as those who were Lunatic; and the number of children who were at School. These Tables also exhibit the average weekly cost per head of inmates actually in the Poorhouse during the year ended 14th May 1894 for maintenance and education; and the average weekly expenditure per head of inmates for whom there is accommodation in the Poorhouse for the same period, under the following heads, viz.:—Management, including salaries, wages, rations, and estimated value of lodging of officials; House Accommodation; and Medical Relief.

Local Taxation Contributions.

At your request we have examined the claims by Parochial Boards to participate in the contributions of £20,000 in respect of

Poor Law.

Poor Law Medical Relief and Trained Sick Nursing in Poorhouses, and of £115,500 for maintenance of Pauper Lunatics, with a view of certifying the amounts to be distributed under section 22 (4 and 5) of the Local Government (Scotland) Act of 1889 and section 2 (3) of the Education and Local Taxation Account (Scotland) Act, 1892.

Medical Relief.

The number of Parishes which have this year resolved to comply with the conditions annexed to participation in the Medical Relief Grant is 804. Of these, 8 have failed to establish their claims by producing vouchers for the required amount of expenditure from their own funds, or otherwise satisfying us that the conditions of the Grant had been fulfilled. Last year 794 Parishes established their claims; this year 796. The detailed account of the distribution, showing the amount expended on Medical Relief to the poor in each Parish for which vouchers have been produced and the sum apportioned to it from the Grant, will be found in the Appendix, the total amount distributed being £20,004, 10s. 1d., including £1936, 10s. 11d. in respect of trained sick-nursing in Poorhouses. The Grant was distributed at the rate of 8s. 6¼d. per £ of vouched expenditure.

App. (B.) No. 11.

The whole sum expended on Medical Relief to the Poor in all Parishes in Scotland, whether participating in the Grant or not, during the year ending 14th May 1894 according to the annual returns of the Inspectors, was £47,011, which is equal to 2·8d. per head of the population of Scotland in 1891, and 10s. 0½d. per head of persons on the roll at 14th May.

Pauper Lunacy.

A detailed account of the distribution of the Grant in aid of the Cost of Maintenance of Pauper Lunatics will be found in the Appendix, showing the Parishes participating, the total cost of maintenance, the cost of maintenance in accordance with the scheme of participation, and the amount due to each Parish from the Grant. The Grant was distributed at the rate of 11s. 3½d. per £ of admissible expenditure.

App. (B.) No. 11.

Assessments.

The number of Parishes and Combinations now assessed is 840, and the number still raising the funds by Voluntary Contributions is 45.

App. (B.) No. 23.

In 661 of the Assessed Parishes the funds for the relief of the poor are raised by an equal rate upon owners and occupants respectively, and in 166 there is a classification of occupants, in terms of the 36th section of the Act 8 and 9 Vict. c. 83. In 13 Parishes the assessment is still levied according to established usage.

Elected Members.

We have increased the number of Members to be elected to the Parochial Boards of Bothkennar from 2 to 5; Stirling 9 to 12; Dunnottar 3 to 4; and South Knapdale 4 to 5.

In many Parishes we have thought it right, for various reasons, to approve alterations in the days for the election of Members to the Parochial Boards.

Applications to Sheriffs.

Returns of legal proceedings under the Statute in the Sheriff Courts have again been furnished to us by the courtesy of the Sheriffs-Substitute, and an abstract is inserted in the Appendix.

App. (B.) No. 1.

The total number of applications to Sheriffs on the ground that relief had been improperly refused, as returned by the Sheriffs-Substitute, was during the past year 388. These numbers, however, fall short of the actual number of applications, as in several Sheriff Courts no complete record is kept of them. The number of applications in which Sheriffs felt called upon to grant interim orders of relief during the past year was, as stated to us by them, 21. The number of applicants admitted to the roll of paupers by final order of the Sheriffs during the past year was 126. Poor Law.

The number of prosecutions under the 79th and 80th sections of the Statute during the past year has been 136, and of convictions 76.

Our opinion having been asked as to the legality of electing the Chairman of a Parochial Board by secret ballot, we stated that the course adopted was highly unadvisable, and one for which there was no precedent; but we were not prepared to say that it could be set aside in a Court of Law. Election of Chairman of Parochial Board by secret ballot.

Having been consulted by a Parochial Board as to the proposed appropriation of certain legacies for the Poor to the erection of paupers' houses, the rents of which are to be accumulated for re-investment till they amount to the sum appropriated, we intimated that there was no objection to the investment proposed, but that we were of opinion that, while interest in the shape of rent might be legitimately recovered from the paupers, it would not be right to require the rate-payers to provide, in addition, for the replacement of the capital sum. Appropriation of certain legacies to the erection of paupers' houses.

In reply to an inquiry as to whether a Parochial Board could legally pass a resolution that no business shall be transacted unless three or more members are present, we intimated our opinion that there is nothing either in the Statute or at Common Law to prevent a Bye-law to that effect being passed. Quorum at Parochial Board.

A request having been made by a Parochial Board that the Board would be pleased to issue an order abolishing altogether the rental qualification for managers of the Poor in Burghal Parishes and Combinations, we pointed out that the Statute required a qualification and that we had no power to comply with the request. Rental qualification for Managers of the Poor.

In consequence of hardship to a Parish in Scotland, through a removal from England, we intimated our opinion that although no illegality seemed to have occurred, it might usefully be provided in any future Poor Law legislation that warrants of removal should not be granted without, at least, a fortnight's notice to the Parish to which it was proposed to send the pauper. Notices in removal of paupers.

The Governor of a Poorhouse having written to us respecting the visits of friends to inmates in the House, we stated that Rule XLIV. of the Rules for the Management of Poorhouses makes it clear that the Governor or Matron has power to withhold from any inmate the privilege of receiving visitors. But we pointed out that this power should be exercised with discretion; e.g., that while it might be well to exclude visitors of doubtful character, or persons not related to dissolute inmates, we were of opinion that near relations should generally be allowed to visit inmates unless there is good reason to the contrary. Visits of friends to inmates of Poorhouses.

We expressed our opinion that the declaration of expenses required by the Elections Corrupt and Illegal Practices Act, 1890, Elections Corrupt Practices Act, 1890.

Poor Law.

having been lodged within the Statutory period, is valid, although undated.

Fever case. Parochial Board and County Council.

In reply to an inquiry as to whether a Parochial Board had any recourse against the County Council in the case of relief granted to a man suffering from enteric fever, we stated that we were not aware of any means whereby repayment could be obtained from the Local Authority.

Upkeep of public nurses.

A Parochial Board inquired of us if they could legally subscribe to a fund for the upkeep of public nurses, and we stated that we saw no objection to a subscription, provided an understanding was come to that pauper patients are to be attended.

Voting at Election of Elected Members.

Questions respecting the rights of tenants under £4 and of Inhabitant Occupiers under section 29 of the Local Government Act, 1889, to vote at the election of members to the Parochial Board, having been submitted to us, we intimated our opinion that tenants are not disqualified in consequence of their rates being levied through the owners. In the case of Inhabitant Occupiers, however, as they could not be said to be assessed for Poor's Rates either directly or indirectly, we held that they could not vote.

Appointment of Medical Officer.

We were asked as to the competency of a Parochial Board appointing each of the resident medical men in turn for one year as their medical officer, and we replied that such procedure was within their competency.

Voting by Registrar, &c.

We intimated our opinion that the Registrar and an Officer under the Burial Grounds Act, may vote at meetings of the Parochial Board (if members of such Board), provided they are not personally interested in the matter upon which the vote is taken.

Definition of a Burghal Parish.

An inquiry having been addressed to us as to whether a certain Parish could not now be considered a Burghal Parish, we stated that a Parish is not a Burghal one unless the whole Parish is within the Burgh.

Expenses of adjustment of Registration Districts.

We were asked whether the expenses incurred in having the registration districts of certain parishes adjusted should be charged under the Poor Law Acts as 'Law Expenses' or under the Registration Acts, and we stated that it rather appeared to us that such expense ought to be charged against the Registration Assessment.

Right of certain proprietors to seat at the Parochial Board.

A question having been addressed to us as to the right of the proprietors in the part of a Parish annexed thereto by an order of the Boundary Commissioners to a seat at the Parochial Board,—the Parish being unassessed for Poor Law purposes,—we intimated our opinion that the Heritors in the added part of the Parish are in precisely the same position as the other Heritors, in so far as the Parochial Board is concerned.

Parochial Board Deputations.

We received a letter inquiring if the expenses of Parochial Board Deputations to London in connection with the Local Government (Scotland) Bill, formed a proper charge against the Rates. In reply we stated that the Board had no power of audit; but that we were of opinion that the expenditure referred to was of doubtful legality.

Prospects of the able-bodied unemployed.

During last winter a very voluminous correspondence took place on the subject of the position and prospects of the able-bodied unemployed in Scotland, and at your request one of our General Superintendents,—Mr Barclay,—visited the principal centres of population for the purpose of inquiring into the subject. A copy of Mr Barclay's exhaustive Report was transmitted to you and has now been published as a Parliamentary paper (Parliamentary Paper, No. C.—7410, year 1894). Poor Law.

We regret to have again to state that during the year great difficulty was experienced in the Parishes of the Lews in connection with the collection of the Assessments. In one parish, indeed, the financial embarrassments threatened to assume a very serious aspect. From Reports, however, which we called for from time to time as to the progress made in the collection of the Rates, it would appear that the danger of a present crisis has been again averted. But the remarks which we made in 1888 in our 43rd Annual Report on this subject seem to be as applicable now as then. Financial difficulties in the Lews.

Our attention having been directed by you to an allegation which had been made, that the treatment of the Blind Poor by Parochial Boards, was not, as a rule, in accordance with the recommendations contained in the recent 'Report of the Royal Commission on the Blind, the Deaf and Dumb, &c. of the United Kingdom,' we obtained an extensive list of cases in support of this allegation, and instructed one of our General Superintendents to inquire into the matter. In consequence of his Report we did not deem it necessary to take any further action. A copy of Mr Barclay's Report will be found in the Appendix. Treatment of the Blind Poor. Appendix A., No. 8.

We have investigated allegations, involving charges more or less serious, against 22 Inspectors of Poor, and we have been under the necessity of dismissing 7 of these as unfit for the office; we censured or admonished 9 Inspectors, whose errors were not of so grave a character as to call for more serious punishment; and we have had the satisfaction of acquitting 6 Inspectors of the charges which were brought against them. Complaints against Inspectors of Poor.

We have been called upon to investigate 8 complaints against Governors of Poorhouses; in 7 cases we found the complaints groundless, but in 1 case we found it necessary seriously to warn the Governor. Complaints against Governors of Poorhouses.

During the past year we have been called upon to investigate charges against 2 Medical Officers. In both cases we found the complaints groundless Complaints against Medical Officers.

II.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

Public Health.

We have continued, from time to time, during the past year to afford such assistance as it was in our power to give to all Local Authorities who have applied to us for advice or information regarding the execution of the Public Health Acts. These applications continue to be very numerous.

Complaints regarding Nuisances.

We have also received during the past year a large number of complaints from individuals regarding nuisances which it was alleged the Local Authorities had failed to remove. Our practice has continued to be to transmit these complaints, in the first instance, to the Local Authority for their observations, and thereafter to give such instructions as might be necessary; and we have much satisfaction in stating that, in the great majority of cases in which the complaint was ascertained to be well founded, the Local Authority, on our calling their attention to it, at once took steps to remove the nuisance.

Cholera.

Owing to the continued existence of Cholera on the Continent, we found it necessary to maintain vigilance, and to see that the Local Authorities held themselves in readiness against its possible introduction into this country. Part III. of the Public Health Act was continued in force during the year, and the various Directions and Regulations, issued by us, likewise remained in operation. It was found necessary to revise the Regulations applicable to the importation of rags, dirty bedding, and disused or filthy clothing, and new Directions and Regulations, dealing with these matters, were issued. We also deemed it advisable to re-issue Dr Littlejohn's Memoranda as to the treatment of Cholera and as to Disinfection. Being impressed with the risks that exist, owing to the difficulty of diagnosing the disease, we made arrangements for having a bacteriological examination of the intestinal contents in any suspicious cases. The object we had in view was twofold:—(1) that the natural apprehension in the public mind, on the occurrence of cases suspected to be Cholera, should be allayed by the demonstration of the cause of death; (2) that, if Cholera were really present, the necessary precautions prescribed by the Local Authority should secure ready acquiescence.

App. (A.) No. 12.

With the view of ascertaining how far Local Authorities were prepared to meet a visitation of Cholera, we, on 25th July 1894, asked all the Medical Officers of seaboard districts to report to us whether hospital accommodation had been provided, and whether any other matters demanded attention. The result of our inquiries was in general satisfactory. We found that, with few exceptions, the Local Authorities had made provision for any case that might occur, and that they were alive to the necessity of using every precaution. Public Health.

On the 9th September 1893, the Privy Council issued an order containing regulations as to the detention of ships infected with Cholera. The new Order cancelled the previous Orders of 12th July and 9th August 1883 dealing with the same subject. It re-enacted the provisions of these Orders with such modifications as were necessary, and it provided for precautions being taken in the case of ships which, though not having Cholera on board, had come from places infected with Cholera, or had passengers on board in a filthy or otherwise unwholesome condition. We transmitted a copy of the new Order to all Local Authorities in Scotland, and called attention to its provisions. Privy Council Order.

The Order provides, inter alia, that every Local Authority within whose district persons are likely to be landed from any ship coming foreign, shall fix some place within their jurisdiction where ships may be moored or anchored for the purposes of the Order. If no safe or suitable anchorage exists within the jurisdiction of the Local Authority, they may fix some place outwith their jurisdiction, but as near thereto as possible, provided the consent of the Local Authority having jurisdiction over the place so fixed has been obtained. In the event of such consent being refused, the question may be referred to the Board. Only one case has occurred where a reference to us became necessary. The Local Authority of the Burgh of Ayr resolved to fix Lamlash Bay as the anchorage for infected ships coming to Ayr. The Local Authority of the Arran District refused consent, and the question thus came to be referred to us for decision. After inquiry, we determined Lamlash Bay to be the place where ships infected with Cholera arriving at Ayr should be moored or anchored for the purposes of the Order. Fixing of Anchorages for Cholera-infected ships.

A question of some importance as to the interpretation of the Burgh Police Act of 1892 came before us in the course of the year. Doubt had arisen whether the provisions of Section 219 of that Act, as to the formation of sewers, supersede, so far as Burghs are concerned, the provisions of Section 73 of the Public Health Act of 1867. While we were of opinion that the enactments of the more recent Act must rule, we did not feel justified in giving any deliverance on the legal force of a Statute which it is not our duty to administer, and we recommended the Local Authority to take the opinion of Counsel. This suggestion was adopted, and Counsel (Mr Asher) advised that new sewers within a Burgh must be constructed and paid for under the provisions of the Burgh Police Act, and that it is no longer competent to make use of the provisions of the Public Health Act for the construction of sewers within Burghs. Drainage Clauses of Burgh Police Act, 1892.

Our Inspecting Officer for the district having reported to us, in September 1892, that the Burgh of Lochmaben was in a very insanitary condition; that the water supply was obtained from wells, many of which were seriously polluted; and that there was no system of drainage; we directed the attention of the Local Authority to these defects, and called on them to provide a remedy. The Local Authority, however, declined to take any action, and, as they persisted in their refusal, we presented a petition to the First Action against Local Authority of Burgh of Lochmaben.

Public Health.

Division of the Court of Session. No answers were lodged on behalf of the Local Authority, and, on 28th February 1893, the Court issued the following Interlocutor:—

Edinburgh, 28th February 1893.

The Lords, no answers having been lodged for the respondents, having heard counsel for the Board of Supervision on the petition and complaint, Find that the respondents have hitherto failed to do what was required of them by the Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1867, or otherwise by law, and that obstructions have thereby arisen in the execution of the said Act, and that the respondents are bound to take the proceedings required by Statute for carrying out a proper system of drainage in the Burgh of Lochmaben, and procuring a sufficient and suitable supply of water for the domestic use of the inhabitants of said Burgh, and for the sanitary and other public purposes of the said Burgh: therefore remit to James Barbour, civil engineer, Dumfries, to prepare a scheme for procuring a sufficient and suitable supply of water for the domestic use of the inhabitants, and for the sanitary and other public purposes of the said Burgh, and for effecting the adequate drainage of the said Burgh, and to report to the Court within fourteen days.

(Signed) J. P. B. Robertson, I.P.D.

Mr Barbour having reported on several schemes, the Court again had the matter under consideration, and, on 7th June 1893, they pronounced a further Interlocutor to the following effect:—

Edinburgh, 7th June 1893.

The Lords having resumed consideration of the petition and proceedings, with the report of Mr James H. Barbour, C.E., No. 24 of process, and heard counsel for the petitioners, Ordain the respondents, the Local Authority of the Burgh of Lochmaben, to execute the works necessary for the introduction of a suitable water supply into the said Burgh, in terms of said report (Bankhead Scheme), and that at the sight and to the satisfaction of the said James H. Barbour, and decern; remit to Mr Barbour to see the works properly executed, and to report to the Court: Quoad ultra, continue consideration of the petition.

J. P. B. Robertson, I.P.D.

In spite of the order of the Court, the Local Authority persisted in declining to authorise Mr Barbour to proceed, and it was not until further action was threatened that they accepted tenders for the execution of the water-works. These are now being proceeded with, and the Board have in the meantime agreed not to press for the immediate execution of a drainage scheme for the Burgh.

Public Health.

The Annual Reports furnished to us by the Medical Officers and Sanitary Inspectors of Counties continue to afford evidence of the zeal and exceptional qualifications of these Officers. These Reports were this year, as in previous years, carefully considered by us, and the attention of the respective Local Authorities was directed to any matter on which it appeared to us that action should be taken. We are satisfied from the answers received that the County Local Authorities in general are alive to the important nature of the duties imposed on them, and ready to give effect to the valuable recommendations in the Reports. This year we again quote a few extracts on subjects of general interest and importance.

Annual Reports of Sanitary Officers of Counties.

App. (A.) No. 13.

In pursuance of the powers conferred upon us by the 8th Section of the Public Health Act, and the 77th Section of the Burgh Police Act, we have approved Bye-laws for regulating the duties of the Sanitary Inspector and the Medical Officer in the Districts of thirty-seven Local Authorities, similar in most cases to the Bye-laws framed by us for the guidance of Local Authorities, and referred to in our Forty-Fifth and Forty-Eighth Annual Reports.

Bye-laws for Sanitary Officers.

Proceedings under Sect. 62.

We have also, as empowered by the 62nd Section of the Act,* confirmed Rules and Regulations respecting common lodging-houses in six districts. These were, in most cases, similar to the Rules and Regulations framed by us and recommended to all Local Authorities for adoption, and which were printed in the Appendix to our Report of 1883. A number of Local Authorities, however, found it advisable to vary the terms of these Rules and Regulations so as to suit the special circumstances of their respective Districts.

Proceedings under Sect. 59.

As empowered by Section 59 of the Act, we have approved in two cases of the sum payable per night, according to which it is ascertained whether a house, or part thereof, is a common lodging-house, being raised from fourpence to sixpence.

Proceedings under Sect. 44.

In terms of Section 44 of the Act, we have given our consent, in three cases, to Regulations for houses or parts of houses let in lodgings, or occupied by members of more than one family, such houses or parts of houses not being Common Lodging-Houses in the sense of the Act. These were all framed on the model of the Regulations recommended by us, and printed in the Appendix to our Forty-Sixth Report.

Proceedings under Sect. 30.

We have been called upon to exercise our powers, under the 30th Section of the Act, upon two occasions by parties dissatisfied with resolutions of the Local Authority giving their consent to the establishment within burghs or villages of one of the noxious trades enumerated in that Section. In accordance with our previous practice, the Inspecting Officer of the District made a careful inquiry upon the spot into the circumstances connected with these cases. In both instances we determined that the consent of the Local Authority ought not to have been given. In one instance a question arose as to whether a lead-melting business came under the provisions of Section 30. We determined that lead-melting is a business injurious to health, and that, accordingly, the Section applied.

* Throughout this portion of our Report the 'Act' referred to is the Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1867. When any other Act is referred to its title is given.

Public Health.

Removal of Sanitary Inspectors.

During the past year we gave our sanction, in terms of Section 54 (4) of the Local Government Act, in four cases to Local Authorities removing Sanitary Inspectors.

Proceedings under Sect. 39.

In terms of Section 39 of the Act we approved the plans of additions and alterations at the Hospitals of the Burghs of Helensburgh and Portobello; we approved the plans of Hospitals for the Badenoch District of Inverness-shire, and for the Burgh of Leith; also of five Hospitals in Lanarkshire—four for the Middle Ward, at Motherwell, Stonehouse, Shotts, and Longriggend respectively, and one at Lightburn, for the Middle and Lower Wards jointly; we also approved the sites and plans of Hospitals for the Turriff District of Aberdeenshire, the Burgh of Dundee (for Small-pox and Cholera), the northern District of Ayrshire (at Dalry), the Cupar District of Fife, the East District of Berwickshire, the Lorn District of Argyllshire (at Dalmally), the St Andrews District of Fife, the Burgh of Stewarton, the Burgh of Banff, and for the following Combinations, viz., the County and Burgh of Peebles, the Lower District of Wigtownshire with the western District of Kirkcudbrightshire and the Burgh of Newton-Stewart, the Annan District of Dumfriesshire with the Burgh of Annan, and the Northern District of Ayrshire with the Burgh of Kilwinning. We further approved sites of Hospitals for the Arran District of Buteshire, the Linlithgow District of Linlithgowshire, the Burgh of Kirkintilloch, the Burgh of Ayr, the Burgh of Oban, and the upper District of Renfrewshire.

In addition to the Hospitals enumerated above, a large number of Local Authorities have acquired houses which can be used in an emergency for cases of Cholera and other infectious diseases, while several have provided themselves with portable huts or tents for the same purpose.

Bye-laws under Burgh Police Act.

By Section 318 of the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, the duty is laid upon us of confirming Bye-laws made under that Act relating to sanitary matters. Four applications were made to us during the year to confirm Bye-laws for the regulation of slaughter-houses. These we confirmed, in so far as they related to sanitary matters.

Loans from Public Works Loan Commissioners.

During the past year we have received 37 new applications by Local Authorities for our recommendation of loans from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, the aggregate amount of these proposed loans being £96,065, of which we were able to recommend £95,865. Of the applications recommended, the sum of £69,711 was for the execution of waterworks, £21,150 for sewage and drainage works, and £5,004 for Hospitals.

Since the passing of the Public Health (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1875 (11th August 1875), we have received 505 applications from Local Authorities for our recommendations of loans. The aggregate amount of these proposed loans is £1,856,596. The total amount of loans recommended by us during the above period is £1,790,027, the amount which we have declined to recommend, during the same period, being thus £66,569. Of the loans recommended by us, £1,210,849 was for the execution of waterworks, £359,173 for sewage and drainage works, £167,293 for the erection of Hospitals, and £52,712 for water and drainage combined.

App. (B.) No. 15.

We print in the Appendix a Table showing the applications which have been made to us during the year, and the manner in which they have been dealt with by us. Public Health.

In our last Report we stated that the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, had been adopted by 84 County and District Local Authorities, and 74 Burghal Local Authorities. We have since received intimation of the adoption of the Act by 6 County and District Local Authorities, and 18 Burghal Local Authorities. Since the publication of the last Report we have revised the populations formerly given in so far as these were affected by the operation of the Orders of the Boundary Commissioners; and on this new basis we find that the Act has now (26th September 1894) been adopted by:— Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889—Adoption of Act.

90 County and District Local Authorities with a population of	1,368,162
92 Burgh Local Authorities with a population of	1,692,895
Or, 182 Local Authorities with an aggregate population of	3,061,057
If to these be added the population of the Burghs of Edinburgh, Dundee, and Greenock, having notification clauses under their Local Acts, viz.:—	478,766
It appears that the system is in force in a total population of	3,539,823
Out of the entire population of Scotland in 1891 of	4,025,647

A list of the Local Authorities with their relative populations will be found in the Appendix. App. (B.) No. 16.

Twenty-five Local Authorities have availed themselves of the power to extend, with the approval of the Board, the notification to infectious diseases not specified in the Act, viz.:—20 Local Authorities adding Measles, and 5 adding Measles and Whooping-cough. In three cases the addition of Measles and Whooping-cough has been revoked.

On 25th July 1894, we again directed the attention of Local Authorities to the expediency of temporarily adding British Cholera and Choleraic Diarrhœa to the list of diseases under the Notification Act, and, in response to our circular, 38 Local Authorities with the approval of the Board temporarily extended the Act to the above-named diseases.

We have received for the year ending 31st December 1893, returns of infectious cases notified to 85 County and District Local Authorities and 78 Burghal Local Authorities, in which the system has been established either under the General or Local Acts. These returns have been tabulated and printed in the Appendix. Notification Returns. App. (B.) Nos. 17 and 18.

The following summary shows the total cases notified, and the deaths reported to have occurred from each disease within the District of the 163 Local Authorities, having an aggregate population of 3,268,914. Medical Practitioners' Fees. App. (B.) No. 18.

The total cost in Medical Practitioners' fees for notifying Infectious Disease in the Burghs and Districts from which Returns have been received, amounted in 1893 to £5,132, 8s., of which Glasgow contributed £902, 7s., Edinburgh £590, 12s. 6d., and Aberdeen £204, 3s. respectively; but the Returns are not complete.

Current Revenue and Expenditure.

App. (B.) No. 14.

It appears from the Returns made to us that the current revenue of Local Authorities for Sanitary Purposes under the Public Health and Local Government Acts amounts to £380,973, of which the sum of £301,323 was derived from assessment, and £79,650 from other sources. The total Expenditure not defrayed out of Loans was £389,589; of which there was expended on drainage £10,833; water supply, £40,976; hospitals, £102,862; salaries, £52,491; repayment of debt, £60,842; payment into sinking fund, £5,024; interest on debt, £49,814, and on other purposes £66,747. These 'other purposes' include vaccination, burials, disinfectants, and a number of other heads of miscellaneous expenditure.

At your request we again examined the claims by Local Authorities to participate in the contribution of £15,000 from the Local Taxation Account, in aid of the cost of Medical Officers and Sanitary Inspectors. We print in the Appendix a detailed account of the distribution for last year, showing the Local Authorities participating, and the amount received by each Local Authority.

VACCINATION.

Vaccination.

An abstract of all the Modifications of the Vaccination Act framed by us, in pursuance of the powers conferred by the 12th Section of that Statute, and approved by the Lord Advocate, from the passing of the Act down to this date, is printed in the Appendix, showing the Parishes from which the applications were made, and the modifications which were granted.

Modifications. App. (B.) No. 22.

We print in the Appendix Abstracts of Returns from all Parishes in Scotland, which have been made in compliance with our Regulations, by the Vaccinators appointed under the Vaccination Act for the half years ended 31st December 1893 and 30th June 1894. These returns show the number of persons vaccinated successfully and unsuccessfully during the half year, the number of cases in which certificates of insusceptibility have been granted, and the number of persons vaccinated who were not in receipt of parochial relief. They relate exclusively to vaccinations performed by the Vaccinators in their official capacity, i.e., cases of paupers and the children of paupers, and of those persons not paupers whom the Parochial Board have authorised the Vaccinator to vaccinate; and they do not include vaccinations performed by the Vaccinators, or other medical practitioners, in the course of their private practice.

Number of Persons Vaccinated. App. (B.) No. 20.

We also print in the Appendix an Abstract of Returns, made by the Inspectors of the Poor from every Parish in Scotland, of defaulters under the 18th Section of the Vaccination Act, as required by our Regulations, for the year ended 30th June 1894. That abstract shows the number of defaulters, the number of persons vaccinated during the year in terms of the Section referred to, the number of prosecutions under Sections 17 and 18 respectively, and the number of such prosecutions in which penalties have been adjudged.

Number of Defaulters. App. (B.) No. 21.

The operation of the Central Institution for the collection and distribution of Vaccine Lymph in Scotland, during the past year has continued to be entirely satisfactory. We print in the Appendix the Report for the past year by Dr Husband, Superintendent of the Institution.

He also inspected all the Poorhouses and conducted 20 special Poorhouse inquiries. Mr Mackenzie visited 326 Parishes and conducted 15 special inquiries. Mr Penney, since his appointment in January, has visited and inquired into the administration of the law in 154 Parishes and conducted 4 special inquiries. App. (A.) Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, & 6.

Inspecting Officers' Reports.

The Inspecting Officers of the Board have visited and reported upon the sanitary defects of as many places as their time permitted. During the past year 9 special reports have been made by Mr Peterkin, and 29 by Mr Falconar Stewart. Mr Barclay has made 35 special reports, Mr Mackenzie 27, and Mr Penney 19. Our Medical Officer, Dr Littlejohn, has also made 115 special reports in cases where the existence of disease or other circumstances rendered his services desirable. We have transmitted copies of these Officers' Reports to the Local Authorities of the places reported on, and have called their attention to the defects specified.

Medical Officer's Reports.

Work of the Department.

A considerable and increasing amount of labour continues to be imposed upon us in the collection, examination, and tabulation of returns from Parochial Boards and Local Authorities for the information of Parliament or the Government. During the past year we have obtained and furnished Annual Returns in terms of the 'Local Taxation Returns (Scotland) Act, 1881.' We have also obtained, for publication in the Labour Gazette, monthly statistics of pauperism from certain parishes situated in the chief industrial centres. We called for and obtained Returns of sums of money or other funds which have been given, mortified, or bequeathed for the use of the Poor, and have become vested in Parochial Boards. An Abstract of these Returns is printed in the Appendix.

App. (B.) No. 12.

As regards the work of the Department generally, we may state that, from 3rd August 1893 to 25th September 1894, there were held 50 meetings of the Board for the discharge of our duties under the Poor Law and Vaccination Acts, and for the disposal of business under the Public Health Acts. The number of papers, some of them very voluminous, circulated among the legal members of the Board for consideration at their chambers, before being disposed of by the Board, was 80. During the year 1893 there were received by us 12,637 letters and reports, and 19,169 returns; and during the same period there were despatched from the office 20,585 letters and reports, 6,298 printed Minutes of the Board and Circulars, and 18,312 Returns. Departmental.

We regret the loss to the Public Service of a very efficient officer by the retirement of Mr W. A. Peterkin, General Superintendent of the Northern Highland District. We passed the following Minute :— Retirement of Mr W. A. Peterkin.

'The Board in parting with their senior Outdoor Officer, Mr 'William Arthur Peterkin, desire to place on record their appreciation of the manner in which he has discharged, for over fifty years, 'arduous and important duties.

'Mr Peterkin acted as clerk to the Royal Commission, which in '1843 was appointed to inquire into the subject of Poor Law 'Administration in Scotland, and, on the passing of the Poor Law 'Act in 1845, he became a member of the permanent staff of the 'Board of Supervision. In 1852 he was appointed Visiting Officer, 'and, in 1864, General Superintendent of the Northern Highland 'District.

'The value of the public service, which in the discharge of his 'various duties as an Officer of the Board Mr Peterkin has 'rendered, cannot easily be overrated; and the Board feel that his 'retirement is a public loss. His sound judgment, his vast experience, his perfect impartiality and independence, secured the 'confidence of the Board and the respect of the Poor Law and 'Public Health Officials throughout the country.

'There are few civil servants in Scotland who are so widely 'known, or whose opinions carry greater weight, not only in the 'district with which he has been most closely connected, but with 'the community at large.

'The Board request the Chairman to forward a copy of this 'Minute to the Secretary for Scotland, and the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and to Mr Peterkin.'

The Under-Secretary for Scotland thereafter wrote as follows :—

'Having laid before the Secretary for Scotland your letter of the '11th instant, with copy of a Minute of the Board of Supervision 'with reference to the retirement of Mr W. A. Peterkin, Genera 'Superintendent of the Poor, on the 30th ultimo, I am desired by 'Sir George Trevelyan to record his high appreciation of the zea 'and ability with which Mr Peterkin has discharged his important 'duties throughout the period of over fifty years, during which he 'has been in the service of the Board.

'I am to request that the Board will take an early opportunity of conveying to Mr Peterkin this expression of the high estimation which the Secretary for Scotland entertains of his long and valued 'services, and his sense of the loss which the public service sustains 'by his retirement.'

Mr Peterkin having retired, a vacancy occurred during the year in the outdoor staff. Vacancy in Outdoor Staff.

Numerous applications were made to us by candidates, a considerable number of whom appeared to be well qualified. Of these Mr William Penney was considered by us to be the most suitable, and he was accordingly nominated by the Board. Mr Penney has been appointed General Superintendent of the Northern Highland District. Appointment of Mr Penney.

Transfer of powers and duties of Board of Supervision to Local Government Board for Scotland.

Under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, the powers and duties of the Board of Supervision were transferred to the Local Government Board constituted by that Act. It is provided by section 4 (3) that the 'Board shall be deemed to be established 'from and after the date of the first appointment of a Vice-'President under this Act;' and the warrant appointing the Vice-President is dated 26th September. The following letter was received from the Secretary for Scotland and submitted to the final meeting of the Board:—

Office of the Secretary for Scotland,
Whitehall, 15th September 1894.

Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary for Scotland to call your attention to the fact that the present Board of Supervision ceases to exist from and after the date of the first appointment of a Vice-President of the New Local Government Board for Scotland, which will then be established in terms of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894.

But the Secretary for Scotland does not wish the duties of the present Board to terminate without an expression of satisfaction at the energy and public spirit with which those most important and arduous duties have been conducted.

The modification in the constitution of the Board was undertaken by the Government, because it appeared to them advisable upon the occasion of an important change in the Parochial system of Scotland, to place the administrative department which has most to do with local affairs upon a basis more consistent with recent legislative precedents.

I am at the same time to convey to you (personally) the thanks of the Secretary for Scotland for the zeal and ability with which you have discharged the duties of your office, and his sense of the high value of the services which you have rendered, and which he hopes you will continue to render, in promoting the due administration of the Poor Law and Public Health Acts in Scotland.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

APPENDIX (A.)

DOCUMENTS ISSUED AND RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF SUPERVISION.

POOR LAW.

No. 1.—Report by General Superintendent of Poor of Northern Highland District, for the Eight Months ended 30th November 1893.

Edinburgh,
30th November 1893.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that during the eight months ending at this date (when my service as an officer of the Board comes to an end), I have, besides discharging various duties connected with the general business of the Board, made a survey of the Northern District, in the course of which I have visited 108 parishes and places. Having been officially engaged for more than fifty years in making local Poor Law inquiries, I have had opportunities of dealing with nearly all points of interest connected with the relief and management of the poor. In my opinion, the Poor Law business of the Northern District is well attended to, although there may be a few parishes where some regulation book is not written up to date,—an omission which is promptly remedied on attention being called to it. The Parochial Boards meet with punctuality to revise the allowances of the poor on the Roll, and to deal with new applications, the allowances are paid to the poor at regular intervals, and they are duly visited at their own homes. There are now comparatively few Parochial Boards in the District whose audited accounts are not printed and issued for the information of the ratepayers along with lists of the poor persons relieved, showing the amount of relief afforded in each case. There are, at the present time, twelve statutory Poorhouses in the District having sanctioned accommodation for 1118 inmates, and there is every prospect of another being provided by the four parishes of the Lews, while, in terms of the 65th Section of the Statute, a number of parishes, not being members of any Poorhouse Combination, have acquired the right to offer relief in some Poorhouse.

The area and population of the District, checked from the latest information, derived from the Census Reports, which I had lately an opportunity of consulting (varying somewhat from the figures quoted in my report of 5th April*), are as follows :—

No.	Counties.	No. of Parishes in County.	Population in 1891.	Area in Square Miles.	Poor on Roll Jan. '93.	Total Persons Chargeable including Dependants.

* The changes given effect to in this Table were consequent on the orders of the Boundary Commission.

Poor Law.

The opinion has long been entertained by some, that, a change should be made in our present arrangements in Scotland for the administration of the Poor Law, and that there should be an extension of the area of management, and of rating, and of settlement of paupers, as well as a reconstruction of the local Administrative Authority, in short that there should be in Scotland Parish Unions, as in England and Ireland. I am not of that opinion. While, no doubt, the constitution of our Parochial Boards might, perhaps, be improved, I think our Highland and Insular Parishes are sufficiently large already for practical purposes, and that an extension of the area of administration would not be advantageous to the poor, nor economical to the ratepayer. On the contrary, I believe, that the smaller the area of poor law administration is, the better it is both for the ratepayer and the destitute poor.

I beg to advert briefly to some matters of administration which I have already dealt with in former reports.

1. The Visitation of the Poor.—The importance and value, in the management of the poor, of judicious visiting, cannot be too strongly urged. I do not mean an over frequent or too inquisitorial visit. The statute requires as a minimum that each pauper shall be visited by the Inspector at least once in six months, but there are always cases requiring to be more frequently looked into in the interests of the parish, so well as of the paupers themselves.

2. In-door Relief.—The advantage of having the power of offering relief in a poorhouse is almost universally admitted, but it can only be fully appreciated by those in whom the burden of practical administration of relief falls, it cannot be determined by figures alone, nor is it to be estimated by the number of those who refuse the offer of in-door relief; but rather by the number of persons who are deterred, in consequence of the mere existence of a Poorhouse, from applying for relief, and these cannot be known. The provision of a Poorhouse operates, in my opinion, silently, in restraining persons from applying to the parish, who, if willing, can well enough maintain themselves.

3. The System of boarding Pauper Children in private dwellings was so fully dealt with in my separate Report of 15th April, I need not refer to it further than to say that it stands out prominently as an effective destroyer of the causes of pauperism, and as having been the means by which thousands of children have been rescued from the degradation of being on the Poor's Roll.

4. Publication of Parish Accounts.—Thirty years ago, few parishes in the district published their accounts.—I have persistently urged the advantage of doing so, and I am glad to say that my efforts have been successful. My only disappointment is that the practice is not universal.

5. Parish Relief to Unmarried Mothers.—This subject was dealt with in my report of 8th April, 1871 [26th Report, Appendix A., p. 21]. I then showed that whatever view might be taken as to the morality of making provision for the relief of such women in destitution, it could not be said that the number relieved amounted to a grievous burden, and that the grievance, such as it was, pressed only on a few parishes. At that time the counties of Nairn, Elgin, and Banff were not part of the district. There are 166 parishes in the present district, and in 87 of them there were, in January last, no such women chargeable and in 38 there was only one such case, leaving 41 parishes, with two or more of the remaining 96 mothers of illegitimate children. Public opinion is no doubt strongly against such women receiving relief from the poor rates, but it is equally so against any destitute woman with a young infant being allowed to die or suffer from want,—in all such cases, therefore, the Poorhouse is the proper form of relief. If all Parochial Boards, possessing the right, had the moral courage to offer in-door relief in every case of the kind, the poor rolls would soon be purged of nearly all such objectionable cases.

6. Inter-Parochial Accounts were at one time the cause of much trouble, but since 1875, the whole of this part of Parochial work has been on a satisfactory footing.

7. The Substitution of Medical Officers' Registers of sick poor for the former Weekly or Monthly Returns, has, I am glad to say, been a most successful improvement, and, so far as I have been able to gather, the change has given almost universal satisfaction.

8. The longevity of paupers is a very remarkable fact, and was dealt with in my Report of 9th May, 1885. From which the following is quoted:—'It is wonderful how many years some poor old paupers continue to receive out-

Poor Law

'door relief, often of the most meagre description. The advanced ages of a 'large number of paupers in many parishes is quite remarkable.' I then gave a few instances from the Roll of only one parish, which I may here repeat. Twelve had been on the Roll for 30 years, 47 for 20 years to 29 years, and 47 had been for 10 to 19 years. Two of those on the Roll were above 100 years of age, 12 were 90 and under 100, 43 were 80 and under 90, 24 were 70 and under 80, and 26 were 60 and under 70 years of age. The two paupers who were over 100 years of age had been on the Roll, one for 21 and the other for 25 years. Another who had been on the Roll for 38 years was 84 years of age at the time of her death.

9. The improvement in the Medical Relief Service throughout the District has been very great, chiefly through the operation of the Medical Relief Grant.

10. The intervals between the times of paupers receiving their allowances have been much shortened. These allowances are now, in nearly every parish, paid at intervals of four weeks, while a few are paid for shorter periods; some are, however, still paid for longer periods, at intervals of eight and thirteen weeks. As a rule, allowances are paid in money, although in some cases it is found expedient to give the relief in kind. The allowances are paid partly in meal in only one parish, and that parish is still unassessed.

As my official life has now come to an end, by virtue of the Compulsory Retirement Order in Council, this report is the last I shall have the honour to submit as an Officer of the Board. For the encouragement and support which I have at all times received from the Board, and for the uniform courtesy extended to me by Parochial Boards and Inspectors of Poor, I have every reason to be proud and grateful.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

W. A. PETERKIN,
General Superintendent.

The Secretary.
Board of Supervision,

County of Shetland.

No. 2.—Memorandum by General Superintendent, Northern Highland District with respect to Poor Relief and Assessments, &c.

For convenience of references I have made some notes about Shetland, which I visited for probably the last time, as an officer of the Board, in June.

My first official acquaintance with Shetland was in July 1843, when I accompanied the Poor Law Inquiry Commissioners, and recorded the evidence as to the system of poor relief then prevailing there. I again visted the County in 1847, by direction of the Board, for the purpose of inquiring as to the position of matters consequent on the passing of the Poor Law Act in 1845, and also subsequently, until 1860, when Orkney and Shetland were added to the four Counties, which then formed the Northern (Highland) District, which was under the superintendence of the late Mr Briscoe from 1856 to 1864. Since the latter date, when I was appointed to succeed Mr Briscoe, I have systematically visited Shetland.

The parish of Lerwick was the first to impose an assessment, which it did soon after the passing of the Act. The example set by that parish was very slowly followed by the others, first by Yell in 1851–52, then by Delting and also by Tingwall in 1855–56, and by Sandsting in 1856–57. On the 28th, February, 1861, the Board resolved to issue a minute as to the condition of matters in Shetland, calling on the Parochial Boards there to carry into effect the requirements of the statutes (Sixteenth Report, p. v., and App. A., p. 4). The following parishes thereafter resolved to impose assessments, viz., Bressay in 1861–62, Walls in 1862–63, North Mavine in 1863–64, Nesting in 1864–65, Fetlar and North Yell in 1865–66, Unst in 1865–66, and lastly, Dunrossness in 1867–68.

Poor Law.

In 1871, I reported fully as to the position of matters in the several parishes (Twenty-sixth Report, App. A., p. 33). I always considered the want of a Statutory Poorhouse a serious hindrance to a satisfactory administration of the law, and advised the erection of one in the neighbourhood of Lerwick. At last, in 1884, the parishes of Shetland resolved to combine for the purpose of providing a common Poorhouse under the statute. But it was not until September 1887 that the Poorhouse was ready and its occupation sanctioned.

A few figures will, I think, be sufficient to convey a general idea as to the past and present position of the County as regards pauperism :—

Year.	Population.	Poor on Roll [cases] in May, omitting Dependants.
1851	31,078	717
1861	31,670	745
1871	31,608	1022
1881	29,705	987
1891	28,711	921

I have for many years (since 1867) obtained returns of the number of poor chargeable on the 1st of January. The highest number on the Roll was in 1873, when there were 1093 cases, the lowest was last January, when there were 857 cases on the Roll.

The general business of the parishes visited in June was well attended to.

If the Poorhouse had been in existence thirty-five or forty years ago, it is more than probable that there would not have been anything like the pressure on the rates which there has been.

When I visited the Poorhouse on 27th June, there were 41 inmates, mostly aged and infirm persons (9 men, 23 women, with 4 boys and 5 girls). Of the 32 adults, 27 were on the sick-list.

When assessments came to be imposed, the people began to regard "The Fund" so raised as common property, from which, having contributed to it, they conceived that they were entitled to derive some benefit, directly or indirectly, on the slightest pretext, as from a Benefit Society. To this cause may be attributed much of the pressure on the rates as well as to the shop system which has long prevailed in Shetland. Without a Poorhouse the Parochial Boards were simply helpless in dealing with doubtful applications, especially was this so when an appeal was made to the Sheriff or the Board. Apart, however, from the tendency to throw needy relations on the rates—relations who could and would in former times have been looked after by their friends. I am bound to say that I regard the inhabitants of Shetland generally as an industrious, intelligent, frugal, and temperate people, in past times, patient in adversity, for they have rarely and only of late, and I fear at the instigation of others, obtruded themselves on public notice.

The youth of both sexes are fully alive to the necessity of seeking employment elsewhere than in their own poor country. But for this spirit of enterprise it is hard to say what the present condition of the people might have been. To this cause, among others, is due, in my opinion, the fact that the population of 1891 was less than it was fifty or even sixty years ago.

The small rental of the lands and heritages in Shetland (reduced still further by the decisions of the Crofter Commissioners) has necessitated unusually high poor rates and school rates as well. But low as the rental is, the assessable rental is brought down still lower, in consequence of the large deductions allowed under the 37th Section of the Statute. In a county like Shetland where the lands and heritages are, with the exception of the Burgh of Lerwick, nearly all of a somewhat similar character, I fail to see what advantage is to be gained by allowing any but merely nominal deductions. To allow 25 to 33⅓ per cent. over all lands and heritages, in name of deductions, merely lessens the assessable rental, and enlarges the apparent burden for no good purpose that I can perceive. But the fact still remains that the burden on lands and heritages in Shetland is excessive. The wealth of Shetland lies undoubtedly, not in the land, which, as a whole, is poor and unproductive, but in the sea, and as the great bulk of the people are fishermen or connected in some way with the fishing industry, their crofts can only be regarded as mere dwelling-places when on shore, and which they have on payment of not more than would be required in towns for the use of one or two rooms. It is very obvious that when any proprietor of lands depends solely upon his rents, the burden of the rates must in his case be most oppressive.

The current rates, as returned to me in January last, were as follows :—

Bressay,	2s. 4½d.	on owners—or	4s. 9d.	on owners and tenants combined.
Delting,	2s. 8d.	„	5s. 4d.	„
Dunrossness,	2s.	„	4s.	„
Fetlar,	2s. 10d.	„	5s. 8d.	„
Lerwick,	1s. 2¾d.	„	2s. 5½d.	„
Nesting,	3s. 4d.	„	6s. 8d.	„
Northmavine,	2s. 6d.	„	5s.	„
Sandsting,	2s. 5½d.	„	4s. 11d.	„
Tingwall,	2s. 9d.	„	5s. 6d.	„
Unst,	1s. 11d.	„	3s. 10d.	„
Walls,	3s. 6¼d.	„	7s. 0½d.	„
Yell,	2s. 3d.	„	4s. 6d.	„

The gross rental of Shetland, per last year's Valuation Roll as returned to me, was only £44,889, which gives £1, 11s., 3·23 per head of the population of 1891.

No. 3.—Report by General Superintendent, South-Eastern District, for Year ended 31st March 1894.

Edinburgh, 8th May 1894.

Sir,—I have to state that, during the year ending 31st March last, I reported upon the administration of the Poor Law in 243 parishes. I also conducted 4 special inquiries.

The following is the pauperism of the district, which shows a slight increase over last year, viz. :—a total of 19,073 as against 18,494.

Single women with illegitimate children have unfortunately increased, showing 80 with 114 children, as compared with 66 with 112 children in 1893. Of these, 37 women with 53 children were receiving outdoor relief, and 43 women with 61 children, poorhouse relief.

Poor Law.

I had hoped, for the purposes of comparison, to have given the number of sane poor at the 1st of January in each of the years 1874 and 1894, along with the average weekly cost per head of such poor, but I fear that from various causes, the returns made to me by the Inspectors are not sufficiently reliable to enable me to do this with complete accuracy. Approximately, however, the numbers are, at the 1st January 1874, 18,827 and at the 1st January 1894, 14,845, showing a decrease at the latter date of 3,982. While the number of paupers has thus decreased, it is gratifying to note that the same cannot be said of the average cost per head, which shows an apparent slight increase for the later of the two periods.

Turning to the returns of defaulters under the Vaccination Act as at the 30th September 1893, I find the figures to be something like 1,243. Subsequent information obtained from the various Inspectors shows that out of that number, approximately speaking, 202 have 'left' and 169 have been 'not found.' These untraced cases cannot but be otherwise than a source of anxiety to all concerned in the welfare of the community, as being possibly a source of considerable danger to health should an outbreak of small-pox occur. It should be remembered, however, that there is a possibility of most, if not all of those under the first heading being discovered in other parishes, and it is to be hoped that some of those in the second category may also ultimately be traced. I do not find that any want of energy on the part of the Inspectors in my district is the cause of these defaulters being untraced. On the contrary, I am impressed with the care and trouble taken by Inspectors generally in their endeavours to trace defaulters, for the existence of which, the migrating habits of many of the mining class amongst whom defaulters are to be found, must be largely held responsible.

There is one parish in my district which shows a marked contrast to all others in administering the Vaccination Act.

I give the following figures to show how annually since 1883, the number of defaulters has increased :—

October 1883,	10	October 1889,	8
„ 1884,	14	„ 1890,	27
„ 1885,	9	„ 1891,	22
„ 1886,	11	„ 1892,	37
„ 1887,	9	„ 1893,	46
„ 1888,	12

This increase is in no way attributable to increase of population, but to a wave of enthusiasm on the part of anti-vaccinators.

I drew the attention of the Board to a decision of the Parochial Board to discontinue in the meantime prosecuting defaulters. On a receipt of a communication by the Parochial Board from the Board, requesting that body to comply with the provisions of the Vaccination Act, the minute above referred to was rescinded, but merely by a majority and not unanimously, an amendment being proposed to adhere to the previous resolution, which was to the effect that prosecution be delayed until the Report of the Committee on Vaccination be issued.

The constitution of the Committee appointed to deal with this subject has gradually been formed to include a full representation, if not an actual majority, of members opposed to vaccination, and to such an extent have they carried their opposition, that not only is the question discussed at most meetings, but the poor rates are misappropriated through their action. I instance the position of matters as follows :—

When a case of default is brought before the Parochial Board, the Inspector is instructed by duly recorded Minute to prosecute, and to modify his claim for expenses to, say, 5s. The Sheriff, having fined the defaulter, only decerns for 5s. expenses, although the actual outlay comes up to, say, 8s. The difference of 3s. has to be paid out of some fund, and as the poor rate is the only one available, it is accordingly charged.

Not satisfied with this illegality, at a meeting of Committee when one case of a defaulter, who was fined 20s. and 5s. of expenses was considered, it was resolved that this defaulter should be refunded some 12s., as part of the fine. Subsequently, however, the recipient of this gratuity, seemed to have realised that the farce had been carried too far, and repaid the same.

Poor Law.

It is almost incredible that a body of intelligent men should be found capable of administering public affairs in such a manner.

It affords me much pleasure to report favourably upon the administration of the Poor Law by the Inspectors, generally. Their arduous and delicate duties are carried out most conscientiously. Unfortunately, however, there are three cases where the Board has found it necessary to remove the Inspectors from office.

The first case was one, where irregularities of conduct led to confusion of accounts, which ultimately ended in conduct very discreditable to one holding a position of trust. Overweening confidence of the Parochial Board in the integrity of the Inspector, led them to overlook safeguards, which are at all times necessary to protect the interests of the ratepayers.

The second case was that of an Inspector who was only appointed about two years ago without any special qualification, and who, at the time financially embarrassed, took office without any safeguards being adopted by the Parochial Board, so much so, that he kept no special books into which to enter his collection of rates, and only one account in the bank, upon which he was allowed to operate without any counter-signing of the cheques. Probably being pressed by his late creditors, he acted in a manner which in a very short time led him into default of over £100. Unfortunately, here, although the Parochial Board, when making the appointment, stipulated for guarantee being provided, no such guarantee seemingly was ever produced, the consequence being that a heavy burden will be placed upon a poor community, unless the Parochial Board are able to secure repayment from the Inspector's friends.

The third case was one of the most painful, with which I have ever been connected.

Previous to his appointment to the parish from which he was dismissed, the Inspector had been connected with an Industrial Institution, and Inspector of another parish, both of which appointments he left with not altogether satisfactory testimonials.

It surprised me that with these antecedents he was able to secure any appointment of responsibility.

From the first day of his appointment he seemed determined that he should rule the Parochial Board, instead of being their servant. The Parochial Board, soon after his appointment, instructed him to print and publish the list of paupers, and a statement of the accounts, but evidently determined at that early stage of his career to manipulate the accounts, he ignored his orders and continued to do so, although on another occasion he again received instructions to have his accounts published. Feeling that he was master of the situation, he seemed with plausible excuses to work without any apparent check from the Parochial Board. In May 1893, when the Auditor's Report was submitted, that gentleman drew attention to there being a sum of £142 of arrears of poor rates, and recommended that action be taken to recover them. No action, however, was ever taken by the Parochial Board. At a meeting of the Parochial Board when the accounts to May 1893 should have been submitted, he pleaded as an excuse that illness had prevented him from completing the Books in order that they might be sent to the Auditor. Even then the Parochial Board took no action, and it was not till a few months after, that they were awakened to the position of matters. The result of an official inquiry showed a deficiency of some £500 to £600, between the Parochial Board and School Board Accounts.

An old account under the Public Health Act, which should have been discontinued when the Local Government Act came into force, was still kept open, and the Inspector operated upon this, evidently for his private purposes. In this case no doubt, the Bank authorities were to blame, and I understand they have waived their claim for any overdraft.

The ordinary Parochial Board Account was operated upon by the Inspector without any counter-signature of the cheques.

The Inspector was also Clerk to the School Board and he intimated to the Parochial Board that such and such a rate was necessary to meet financial requirements, but never stated the amount which such rate produced, thus giving himself further opportunities of misappropriating funds.

Independently of these financial irregularities, there were other irregularities in the transaction of the Parochial business, which should have been easily detected by the Parochial Board.

I warned the Inspector some years ago that he had forfeited my confidence, and reported matters to the Chairman of the Parochial Board, who, unfortunately, took a different view of the situation from myself. Perhaps now, however, the Parochial Board may have realised that it would have been better had a little more business forethought been applied to the management of parish affairs.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, Poor Law.

No. 4.—Report by General Superintendent, South Western District, for year ended 30th June 1894.

Edinburgh, 2nd July 1894.

Sir,—Since my last Annual Report, I have been engaged in the inspection of 66 Poorhouses, 164 ordinary visits to parishes, 19 special visits by your direction, and 13 special inquiries ordered by the Board. During 5 or 6 weeks, in the beginning of this year, I was, with consent of the Board, engaged on a special inquiry for the Secretary for Scotland, regarding the 'Unemployed.'

These Tables show an increase of pauperism in every County, except Dumfries, but, in estimating the value of these figures, it must be borne in mind that an allowance should be made for increase of population since the Census of 1891, and that, when the figures were sent to me in January, an extensive and protracted strike had paralysed trade in the West of Scotland. The County of Lanark shows an increase of 5 per cent. over the preceding year. This is, no doubt, attributable in one way to the depression of trade, and also to the fact that two of the largest Poorhouses in Glasgow were full, and the Poorhouse test was therefore inapplicable. The County of Ayr shows an increase of upwards of 4 per cent. over the preceding year, and the significance of this increase is intensified by the fact that it follows a period of decreasing pauperism. The County of Renfrew, which last year showed the largest increase of any County in the District (7 per cent.), this year shows an increase of 3 per cent. only ; it is noteworthy that Greenock and Paisley Poorhouses were not full, and suggests that this may account for the diminished increase of pauperism here, and also for the fact that pauper illegitimacy has remained stationary, while in Lanark it has risen from 7·8 per 1000 paupers to 9·1.

I have reported 66 visits to Poorhouses. These were official inspections, and do not include many other visits which I have made both by day and night. Taken over all, I think you have every reason to be satisfied with the management of the Poorhouses in Scotland, and I am certain that your Poorhouse Hospitals will stand comparison with any similar institutions in the kingdom ; the latest addition, that erected at the East Poorhouse, Dundee, it will be hard to beat. I am glad to see that, while so much has of late been done to improve the condition and treatment of the sick, the Abbey Parochial Board of Paisley has shown a worthy example in providing a mortuary and neat chapel for the respectful care of the dead, and the attendance of friends at the funeral services. I have given much attention lately to Poorhouse dietary, and I regret to observe that there is a growing feeling to view this question in a light which tends to be subversive of discipline. The Poorhouse inmate has become to the sympathetic a social pet who must be indulged with tea and tobacco and idleness, or, should he choose to do some little work to relieve his languor, he is to be regaled with a diet which would suffice for a navvy. By all means, be liberal to the sick and infirm, but withhold everything but bare subsistence from the lazy and dissolute, unless they work for it; this is only just to the small ratepayer who maintains himself and family, often with many a struggle, in hard times. The following is the sick dietary in a Lanarkshire Poorhouse, and I am afraid there are many patients in private life who would not receive as many supplies :— Poor Law.

7 a.m. Half a pint tea, with roll and butter.
8 a.m. Porridge, with half pint sweet milk.
10 a.m. Beef tea.
12.30 p.m. Soup with scone, and meat when ordered, or milk food.
4 p.m. Half a pint tea, and bread.
5 p.m. Porridge, with half pint sweet milk.

Usual sick dietary is :—

Breakfast.—2 oz. oatmeal made into porridge, with ½ pint sweet milk, coffee or tea ½ pint, bread 4 oz., butter ½ oz.

Dinner.—Broth or soup 1 pint, potatoes ½ lb., beef 4 oz., bread 2 oz. (on Friday, fish 8 oz.).

Supper.—Tea ½ pint, bread 6 oz., butter ½ oz.

I find that great diversity exists in the granting of working diet, which is :—

Breakfast.—4 oz. meal made into porridge, with ¾ pint (skim) milk.

Dinner.—8 oz. bread, 1½ pint broth, 4 oz. meat.

Supper.—Same as breakfast.

In some Poorhouses everyone receives this diet who does any work, such as splitting wood, sawing wood, cleaning or scrubbing the wards, digging or raking in the garden, working in the wash-house or laundry, acting as warders, or teasing ropes or hair. In other houses, only those who are employed at work, or perform such an amount as to cause a drain on the system, are allowed this diet, it being considered that light work, such as splitting wood, teasing hair, sewing, knitting, and easy garden work, are merely occupations given to the inmates to help them to pass the time pleasantly and keep them from idle gossiping in the Day Rooms or Yards. But, when a task is imposed, the inmate receives this working diet only if he performs it. The amount of task-work required in different houses varies much, for example, in one house (Old Machar) wood bunchers have to turn out only 100 bundles, while in other houses (South Leith and Perth) 300 bundles are required. In one house (Abbey) 5 cwt. of stones require to be broken to secure working diet, while in another (Barony) 10 cwts.* are demanded. The idea, in the one case, being that the man finding he can do a full day's work in the house will prefer to discharge himself and find work for himself outside, and, in the other case, that no man who appears fit for work outside should be able to earn working diet, and encouraged to settle down in the house content with his lot. Between these two extremes, a graduated scale of task labour and diet is in use in some houses, giving half the amount of meat for half the task if the inmate can do no more; it commends itself to my mind on principle, and it has the recommendation of a governor (of Dundee East) of great experience who has practised it, and who writes :—'My experience 'of our practice is satisfactory. It has, in a considerable number of cases, the 'effect of stimulating the energies of the inmates in an industrial direction. 'It also recognises, in a small way, within the walls of a Poorhouse, those 'qualities of steady application which in the every-day life of business and 'trade seldom fail to bring some measure of success and reward.'

Our classification of Poorhouse inmates is at present arranged according to age and ability. A suggestion has been made that a further classification should be made according to character and previous history. It is proposed that persons of 'respectable' character should have a house, or portion of a house, allotted for their own use. I fear this is impracticable. I do not know the exact meaning which is attached to the word 'respectable'; if it means people who have lived exemplary lives until overtaken by poverty in their old age, I sympathise so far with the view, but I consider that such persons should not be in a Poorhouse at all, but should have ample outdoor allowances, and I am sure, if an analysis of our inmates were now made, it would be found that this principle is acted on, and the number of the 'respectable' class to be provided for in the House would require only a small expenditure on stone and lime. For the other class, whose previous history shows that they have seen better days, I cannot see they should have special consideration, because they have had superior privileges and have abused them. Of course, in the hospitals all classes are to be found, but the same occurs in infirmaries and hospitals where classification by disease only can be adopted.

* Since the above was written, this task has been reduced to 5 cwts.

Poor Law.

The number of inmates of Poorhouses has increased from 4593 in January 1893 to 4869 in January 1894, an increase of 6 per cent. These inmates are accommodated in houses whose population ranges at present from 4 in Long Island to upwards of 1500 in Glasgow (City). There is still much waste of space in many Poorhouses, and it is a pity that the empty wards in some houses cannot be filled by the excess in others, which would lessen their numbers within a safe limit for test purposes. If lunatic paupers can be sent from Glasgow as far away as Dumfries, why should not ordinary inmates also be deported? I cannot fancy a better test, or, if accepted, a more remedial measure, than to offer a Glasgow 'dissolute' maintenance in a distant Poorhouse, provided the law permitted of their being retained there.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

No. 5.—Report by General Superintendent, Southern Highland District, for the Year ended 30th June 1894.

Perth, 16th July 1894.

Sir,—During the year ended 30th June, 1894, I have visited and reported on the administration of the Poor Law in 278 parishes, and conducted 29 special inquires; 150 of these visits and 14 special inquiries have been overtaken since 1st January, 1894.

at 1st January, 1894; for convenience of comparison I have added the corresponding figures at 1st January, 1893. The total increase is 101, which appears satisfactory when it is remembered that the increase between 1892 and 1893 was 339. Poor Law.

On examining the figures in detail, however, it is found that the increase is almost wholly due to the parish of Dundee Combination; where the pauperism has increased by 359 in the 12 months under review. Such a serious increase in one parish has led me to make particular investigation there recently, and I am satisfied that the cause is the serious depression in the jute trade, from which that city is suffering.

With regard to my remarks of last year regarding professional audit, there are still 74 parishes where such audit is non-existent; viz.:—

Argyll, 7;	Aberdeen, 17;	Dumbarton, 3;
Forfar, 22;	Kincardine, 2;	Perth, 23.

Last year there were 84, so that an improvement of 10 has occurred. It is to be trusted that this will continue.

While, as shown in the Table, five counties out of seven show a decrease in pauperism, an increase of lunacy exists in all. I regret that no satisfactory reason can be given to account for this, and am much afraid that lunacy will continue to be an ever increasing burden on the ratepayers. As each lunatic pauper added to the Roll costs approximately £23, 10s. 0d. per annum, the increase of expenditure under this head can easily be realised. The actual increase in the separate counties is Aberdeen, 18; Argyll, 4; Bute, 8; Dumbarton, 2; Forfar, 61; Kincardine, 4; Perth, 2. In Forfar, 41 of the 61 belong to Dundee Combination.

I have noticed during the past year that several parishes are overdrawn at the bank at May 15th. I have no hesitation in saying that this ought not to occur. Emergencies occur frequently which demand outlay: an increase of lunacy, accidents to boats at sea, failure of the fishing or any other industry, and many other things which one cannot foretell, cause heavy outlay to a parish; just as illness, fire, or bad trade fall heavily on individuals; and a small balance on the right side at the end of each financial year is very necessary.

Paying interest on overdraft account is wilful waste of private or public funds. Some parishes, I am aware, defend their position on the ground that the Medical and Lunacy grants have been earned and are due; this may in theory be correct, but as they are not paid till October or November, as a matter of fact, and as this is very well known to all concerned, I am convinced that they should not be taken credit for till they are received; and that they should be looked at as part of the succeeding year's income, which is what they really are.

Thanks to the courtesy of the various chief constables, I have ascertained the number of tramps and vagrants who were present in the district at the Census which is taken twice a year by the police. The numbere are as follows:—

1893, ...	3369

This steady increase is curious, as I am inclined to think that applications from this class are decreasing. I am glad to be able to report that very few Inspectors in the District encourage this class of applicant with relief in cash. Perhaps this accounts for the decrease in applications.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

KENNETH J. MACKENZIE,
General Superintendent.

No. 6.—Report by General Superintendent, Northern Highland District, for the half-year ended 30th June, 1894.

Inverness, July 1894.

Poor Law.

Sir,—I have the honour to report as follows for the half-year ending 30th June, 1894.

Poor Law.—During the period above mentioned, I visited and reported on the administration of the Poor Law in 104 parishes. I also conducted 7 special inquiries.

Having only held office since January 1st, 1894, I have, of necessity, been unable to visit the whole of my district. In such parts, however, as I have inspected, I have found, on the whole, the administration of the Poor Law efficiently carried out. As a body the Inspectors of Poor do their work carefully, and with a regard to public interests.

On January 1st, 1894, there were, as shown by the Inspector's returns, 14,702 paupers in the 9 divisions of the Northern Highlands as against 15,012 on the same date in 1893. In 8 of these 9 districts there was a decrease in the number of paupers. In Caithness alone there was an increase (46). In the absence, however, of statistics as to the population in 1893, when compared with that of last Census, much stress cannot be laid on a mere decrease in the numbers of poor on the Roll.

There is reason also to believe that the returns made are not always accurate. In some parishes I found that the Parochial Board frequently ordered 'Casual 'Relief,' the termination of which was left to the Inspector. This at times resulted in a pauper receiving relief for months together, and yet not being entered in the General Register of Poor and consequently not appearing in the returns. The impression seemed to prevail that the recipient of relief, 'not 'being on the Roll,' would somehow cease to be chargeable at an earlier date. I have always, in such cases, drawn the Inspector's attention to Instruction 1, on p. 195 of Rules, &c. to Parochial Authorities, and impressed on him the vital necessity of entering in the General Register of Poor every case in which relief is given 'by authority of a minute of the Parochial Board or Committee, 'whether the relief be for a short or long period.'

I regret to have to report that in the greater part of the districts visited by me, I have found an almost total absence of disinclination to let relatives receive Parochial Relief. It is right that it should be considered no disgrace to receive such relief where it is unavoidable, but it is undoubtedly the case that, in many instances, a little effort on the part of relatives would keep many, now on the Roll, from being chargeable to their parish. The extended use of visiting schedules will, I am convinced, materially assist in reducing the number of Registered Poor.

Having, as already stated, only held office for a short period, I am unable to report at length on any district. After a longer experience I hope to be able to write at greater detail.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

W. PENNEY,
General Superintendent.

No. 8.—Report on the Treatment of the Blind Poor by Parochial Boards.

16th August 1894.

Sir,—In accordance with your instructions, I have now to report the result of my inquiries as to the treatment of blind poor.

My mode of procedure was to abstract from the list of cases of blind persons in the West of Scotland, supplied by the Hon. Secretary to the Mission to the Outdoor Blind, the cases and particulars of each parish having three or more blind paupers, and these lists I transmitted with a letter to the Inspector of Poor of the parish for general observations :—(1) as to the allegation that 'Parochial Authorities very seldom, in their treatment of poor blind people, 'make any distinction between them and other people not so afflicted or dis 'abled ;' and (2) particular remarks on each case. After receiving these observations and remarks, I revised the cases with the Superintendent of the Mission, and, accompanied by him, visited a number of cases, which he selected as typical, in support of the allegation made by the Mission. I also conferred with Mr Arrol, the Hon. Treasurer of the Mission.

I am sorry to say that the letter of 23rd April, addressed to the Secretary for Scotland, does not, according to Mr Arrol, state exactly the views which the Society desired to express. I am told that there was no wish to take exception to the treatment accorded to blind poor by Parochial Authorities. In the Report of the Mission to the Outdoor Blind for 1892, the Directors say :—'By using our influence with Parochial Boards and other charities, we 'have obtained relief for a number of the aged and infirm ; and it affords us much pleasure to state that the Inspectors of Poor invariably listen to our 'appeals with sympathetic consideration, and are always ready to co-operate 'with us in our endeavours to help the blind.' The Directors consider that Parochial Boards deal kindly with cases that they bring before them, but they desire that power should be given to Parochial Boards to deal more liberally with the blind, simply because they are so afflicted. As an illustration, I instance a case (Peter M'Arthur) in receipt of relief from Greenock parish. There are six persons in the family, and the income, irrespective of the parochial allowance, is about 21s. a week, and the Parochial Board grant 4s. 6d. a week. If this man were not blind he would not be on the Roll, and many Parochial Boards would give 2s. or 2s. 6d. The directors desire that all deserving cases should be treated as liberally as this. They also desire that the Law should be amended to provide for the technical and industrial training of the blind between 16 and 50 years of age.

With reference to the application of the Poorhouse Test in the case of blind poor, the only case to which I am referred, in which hardship seemed to arise, is that of Neil M'Killop, Kilmore and Kilbride, which has twice been before you as a complaint of inadequate relief. This Parochial Board (the only one in Scotland, so far as I know, which does so) make it a rule to grant indoor relief only, and, although you expostulated with them, you were unable to hold the offer as one of inadequate relief, as the man was certified by the medical officer as able to be removed to the Poorhouse without injury to his health.

An examination of the particulars of the cases furnished to me satisfies me that the cases of the blind poor have been carefully and conscientiously considered by the Parochial Boards. Some of the cases I visited were selected by me, because I thought the allowances meagre, but, after visitation, I saw no reason to take exception to the amount of aliment granted. In some cases, from the comfortable condition of the house and its inmates, it was evident that the income was supplemented from other sources (though perhaps not reliable) than those stated ; in others the surroundings were so miserable and untidy, and the people seemed so thriftless, that an increase of outdoor aliment would probably prove a waste of money. In every case that I visited, the recipients of relief expressed contentment with what they had, and seemed thankful for it. My experience in this visitation was quite exceptional, and, whether it arose from a frame of mind induced through this form of affliction, or otherwise, I cannot say, but, on the whole, I never met so many paupers so happy and contented.

The Directors' suggestion imports a new principle into Poor Law administration,—that relief is to be given, not according to the extent of the disability, but its nature—that the disability arising from blindness should be considered a special disability, as lunacy is considered, and that the allowances should be awarded, as in the case of boarded-out lunatics, to supply a liberal maintenance from parochial relief, irrespective of other sources of income. Mr Arrol suggests, as a standard, the cost of indoor relief, say, 4s. 6d. a week. I asked the Superintendent to give me a reason why a blind man should have a larger allowance than one without this affliction but otherwise disabled, and he replied that the blind man was probably an able-bodied man with a good appetite and able to enjoy his food. However true this may be, I do not see that Parochial Boards can, to any material extent, consider it in fixing allowances. Parochial Boards require to provide needful sustenance, and additional comforts should rather be supplied from voluntary charitable sources. Poor Law.

The Mission to the Outdoor Blind was started with the object of teaching the blind to read and finding employment for them, but, in 1881, an Endowment Fund was instituted for the purpose of granting pecuniary aid to the indigent adult blind, with the special view of enabling them to earn a livelihood, and also for supplying special relief in times of distress. In 1893 the expenditure under the original scheme was £1100 and the grants for trading purposes and special relief amounted to £380.

The following extracts are from the observations of the Inspectors on the first and general allegation, as adopted by the Directors of the Mission from the Report of the Royal Commission on the Blind.

The Inspector of Barony writes :—'The particulars of the cases sent you 'will, I think, have satisfied you that the complaint does not hold good so far 'as the blind poor chargeable to Barony is concerned, and that they are each 'dealt with on a more liberal scale than the ordinary poor of the parish. I do 'not see that any distinction can be made between allowances granted to blind 'poor and other poor,—to whom at least equal sympathy can be extended in 'respect of their affliction or disablement,—nor in what respect they should be 'exceptionally treated. The point to be considered is, whether the poor receive 'adequate relief, not in classes but as individuals, and that care is taken that 'their position is not made better than people in the same condition of life who 'do not apply for parochial relief ; and, in the great majority of cases on the 'Barony Roll, I am confident they are better off than the vast mass of the 'population who have to earn their own livelihood. . . . In conclusion, I may 'say that I have all along been in close contact with the Mission to the Out-'door Blind, and can only express the greatest astonishment at the wholesale 'statement made to the Secretary for Scotland.'

The Governor of Barony Poorhouse writes :—'There are 8 men and 20 'women of this class in this poorhouse on this date—4 of the women are in 'hospital, all the others, male and female, are on infirm diet, which is varied 'and ample. They certainly receive more attention than the other inmates 'in every way. Most of them are aged, and the affliction of blindness has come 'upon them late in life, and they have not acquired the habit of moving easily 'about, hence the need for care and kindness being bestowed upon them. 'There is not one of the blind in this Poorhouse that could be more comfort-'able outside. Efforts were made through the granting of outdoor relief, and 'other means in several cases to keep them outside, and failed. Most of them 'that have relations have alienated their affection and care for them by their 'habits and conduct in the earlier years of their life, and any assistance the 'Parochial Board could give outside would not procure proper care and atten-'tion for them.'

The Inspector of Glasgow writes :—'There is no class of poor more ready to 'ask for an increase than the blind, and, when they do apply for it, it is invari-'ably granted. Each case is, of course, decided according to circumstances, 'but there is certainly a leaning with us all to do more for the blind. All 'that can be said, therefore, is, that if there are any of the blind poor who 'think their aliment too small for their needs, they can make application for 'more in the usual way, and I have no doubt the same will be favourably 'considered.'

The Governor of Glasgow Poorhouse writes :—'There are 33 of the class 'resident in the House. Of that number 7 are in hospital, 19 are in infirm 'wards, and 7 in ordinary wards. Our practice has generally been to give this 'class the greater comforts of the infirm wards, exception being made only in the Poor Law.

'case of those who under ordinary conditions would be treated as test cases, and 'whose presence in the infirm department would be likely to cause disturbance. 'I doubt very much if it would be judicious to introduce more generous treat-'ment unless separation from other inmates could be carried out.'

The Inspector of Govan Combination writes :—'I enclose list of names sent 'by you with my observations annexed. So far as my memory goes, no applica-'tion has been specially made to me by, or on behalf of, any of the persons 'named, for an increase of aliment. You will observe that there are circum-'stances connected with many of them, such as their own and family earnings, 'which have not been brought under your notice, and I am inclined to think 'that when all these are brought to light you will consider that our allowances 'are fairly good, but if you are of opinion that some of the allowances ought to 'be increased, I will be glad to submit your views to my relief Committees.'

The Governor of Govan Poorhouse writes :—'There are at present eleven 'totally blind people in the House. Excluding J. A. Y. who is deserted 'by his wife, they are, I think, without near relatives. They are 'located in infirm wards, and, of course, receive D diet, and are otherwise 'made as comfortable as we can make them. They are regularly visited by 'the officials of the "Mission to the Outdoor Blind," and those of them who 'were able were allowed to join in the excursion to the blind. Wm. Cairns 'and the girl M'Lauchlan write to and receive letters from the Mission. 'With the majority of them little more can be done, and they seem happy 'enough, but, in the case of Wm. Cairns, I am anxious he should learn a trade 'and I inclose a letter I have from the Superintendent.'

The Inspector of Old Monkland writes :—'I can safely say, so far as the 'parish of Old Monkland is concerned, there is no foundation for the allegation. 'There are only two cases on the Roll, and they have both received exceptional 'treatment at the hands of the Board.' (Satisfactory particulars given in support of this statement.)

The Inspector of Greenock writes :—'As to the allegation, I don't think it 'holds good as far as Greenock Board is concerned. At least, such is my ex-'perience ; for the Committees invariably distinguish between blind people and 'others not so afflicted, and try to adapt the outdoor allowances to the special 'wants of each individual case.'

The Inspector of Abbey, Paisley, writes :—'The charge made against Parish 'Authorities does not hold good as against the Directors of the Abbey Board. 'On the contrary, the particulars of the following cases show that special con-'sideration is given to the blind poor.'

The Inspector of Kilmarnock writes :—'It is not true that we treat the out-'door blind as we do ordinary paupers who can do a little to help themselves. 'The Board in every case of this sort make an extra allowance unless there 'are other circumstances which lead them to think it is not required.'

The definition of 'blindness' is, I am informed, 'inability to read ordinary 'type with or without the use of spectacles.'

I trust you may be able to inform the officials of the parishes with which I communicated that no complaint was intended to be made against the administration of the law as it stands, but that it was desired that legislation should enable Parochial Boards to be more liberal to the blind poor. It would be an unfortunate result of this inquiry if friction arose between the Parochial Authorities and the Mission.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient Servant,

R. B. BARCLAY,
General Superintendent.

No. 9.—Circular directing Inspectors of Poor to intimate Changes in Classifications to the County Clerks.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 6th October 1893.

Sir,—It has been represented to the Board that, as the Assessments under the Public Health Act in Counties fall to be levied by the County Council in the same manner as the Poor Law Assessment, and that as changes in the terms of the classifications and the amount of deductions may be made by Parochial Boards without the knowledge of the County Council, it would be desirable that the Inspectors of Poor should be instructed to intimate any such changes to the County Clerk. The Board are of opinion that the request is reasonable, and they direct you, in the event of any change being hereafter made, to communicate, without delay, with the County Clerk for the information of the County Council. —I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Poor Law.

Profit derived from the Sale of Surplus Produce* arising from industries carried on in the Poorhouse, and from the sale of live stock and refuse, etc., during the year, will be deducted from the total expenditure on account of 'Maintenance' in arriving at the net cost of Maintenance. [The profit will be held to be the difference between the cost of the materials and the amount received from the sale ; but in no case is the value of the labour of pauper inmates to be taken into account.]

B.—Management includes the cost of books, stationary, etc., and all expenditure on account of the Establishment, viz., salaries and wages of the Officers and house servants ; also the rations, fuel, light, etc., required for non-pauper persons who are employed in the care and management of the poorhouse, omitting the Medical Relief and Teaching Departments.

C.—Medical Relief includes the salaries of Medical Officers, Trained Sick Nurses, and the estimated value of their rations ; also the cost of medicines or drugs, and such medical and surgical appliances as are admissible as Medical Relief under the Rules of the Board of Supervision. [Special diet, spirits, and other stimulants, being included under Maintenance, are inadmissible as Medical Relief.]

D.—Education includes the salaries and rations of Teachers, books and other teaching requisities, when the children are taught in the House ; and books, etc., when the children are taught in out-door Schools.

E.—Expenditure on account of removals, to and from the House (including Funeral), should be charged separately to the Parishes to which the paupers belong, and should not be included in this statement.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

No. 11.—Report by Inspecting Officer, Northern Highland District, for the Half-Year ended 30th June 1894.

Public Health.

Sir,—During the half-year just ended I have reported on the sanitary defects of twenty places. I have visited many more but have not, in these, noticed anything calling for special report.

I would call attention to the very inadequate salaries paid, as a rule, to Sanitary Inspectors, other than those of Counties. A merely nominal sum, such as £5 or £6 per annum, is, too often, all they receive. It is impossible to expect for such a salary any special knowledge or that an able-bodied man will devote his whole time, as ought to be the case, to these duties.

Considerable time must yet elapse before the ideas of Sanitary Officers are looked on as other than 'fads'. In many places there is a tendency, only partly avowed, to consider epidemics as 'visitations of Providence', against which it is almost impious to strive. In the majority, the doctrine of 'what 'was good enough for my father is good enough for me' is firmly rooted. In all, or almost all, the necessity for expenditure on prevention has yet to be grasped. If put into words, the common view would be after this fashion:—'Our money is a tangible thing ; the evils you predict are not yet apparent 'and may not arise. Let us keep our money and take our chance of the 'troubles.'

Even the lesson taught by an epidemic at the doors is frequently not taken to heart. Once its ravages are checked, the feeling springs up that some time must elapse before another similar trouble arises. The water supply, consequently, remains insufficient or polluted the drains unflushed, and offensive matter unremoved.

Progress in Sanitation under these conditions, must needs be slow, but, I am glad to say, hope is not altogether absent. Apathy and want of, or disinclination to spend, money, are the enemies to overcome, and the contest must needs be protracted. Public Health.

It is encouraging to find how anxious some of the Sanitary Inspectors are to do their duty and how well they do it in the absence of local support.

Too many, however, are men on merely nominal salaries and with next to no knowledge of what has to be done. In one Burgh I found the Sanitary Inspector was paid £5, and the Medical Officer, I was informed, £2, 2s. These figures speak for themselves.

With my limited experience of the district I am unwilling to write at greater length, but I may conclude by saying that it seems reasonable to believe that the necessity for action in matters Sanitary is, though slowly, forcing its way into the public mind.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

W. PENNEY,
Inspecting Officer.

The Clerk to the Local Authority.

Whereas we, the Board of Supervision for the Relief of the Poor and of Public Health in Scotland, on the 8th day of August 1893, made certain Directions and Regulations prescribing that, until we should otherwise direct, no dirty bedding, or disused or filthy clothing, whether belonging to emigrants or otherwise, from France, or from any foreign Port in Europe north of Dunkirk, other than Ports of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, or from any Port on the Black Sea or Sea of Azov, whether in Russia, Roumania, Bulgaria, or Turkey, or from any other Port of Turkey in Asia, shall be delivered overside, except for the purpose of disinfection or destruction, nor landed in any port or place in Scotland, except for the purpose of disinfection or destruction:

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 15th September 1893.

(3) Circular with Order of Privy Council containing Regulations as to Detention of Ships infected with Cholera.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 27th September 1893.

Sir,—I am directed by the Board of Supervision to transmit, for the information of the Local Authority, the subjoined copy of an Order of Council, dated 9th September 1893, containing Regulations as to the detention of ships infected with Cholera, &c.

The Board desire to point out to the Local Authority that the new Order is now in force, and that it is their duty to lose no time in giving effect to its provisions.

The Local Authority will observe that this Order revokes the previous Orders of 13th July and 9th August 1883.

The Order provides that every ship in which there is, or has been during the voyage, or during the stay of the ship in a port during the voyage, any case of Cholera, shall be deemed infected.

The Officer of Customs will probably be able to ascertain whether any ship arriving in port is infected, and he will inform the Local Authority accordingly. But occasions may arise when the Local Authority's Medical Officer may think it desirable to make inquiry into the state, as regards Cholera, of ships which have arrived in port, although the Officer of Customs may not have found them to be infected; and it will be seen that in such cases the Local Authority's Medical Officer is authorised to visit and examine the ship, although she may not have been detained by the Customs Officer. If notice is given by the Officer of Customs to the Local Authority that a ship is detained as infected, the Order makes it the duty of the Authority forthwith to cause the ship to be examined by the Medical Officer, with a view of ascertaining whether she is in fact infected with Cholera; and, if the Medical Officer, on such examination, or on an examination made under Article 8, without previous notice from the Officer of Customs, finds that the ship is infected, as defined by the Order, he is to certify accordingly, as provided in Article 9, and to give one copy of the certificate to the master of the ship, and retain the other, or transmit it to the Local Authority. He is also to give to the Board of Supervision information as to the arrival of the ship, or such other particulars as the Board may require.

Under Article 6 of the order, all Local Authorities within whose districts persons are likely to be landed from any ship coming foreign, are required, as speedily as possible, with the approval of the Chief Officer of Customs of the Port, to fix some place for the mooring or anchoring of ships that may be certified to be infected, and as soon as the ship is so certified, she is to be moored in the place fixed for that purpose, and the Medical Officer is then, as soon as possible, to make a medical examination of all persons on board of her, the object being to secure the removal of all sick persons to proper places of isolation, the disinfection of the ship, and the disinfection or destruction of all infected articles in her.

The same Article provides for those cases where there is not within the jurisdiction of the Local Authority a safe or suitable anchorage for the purpose.

As regards the obligation which Article 6 of the Order now imposes on the Local Authorities to whom that Article applies, of making provision for the reception of Cholera patients and of persons suffering from illness who are removed from any ship under Articles 13 and 14, Local Authorities who have already provided hospital accommodation will so far have fulfilled the requirements of the Order; but they should be in a position to effect any extension of their hospital provision that circumstances may render necessary.

If hospital accommodation is not already available for the purposes indicated in the Order, measures must at once be taken for securing and preparing suitable premises, to which persons suffering from Cholera, if such cases should occur, can immediately be removed for care and treatment, and in which they will have proper accommodation, and sickbed as well as medical attendance provided by the Local Authority.

With regard to the provision in Article 12, for taking the names and destinations of persons arriving by an infected ship, but who are not themselves ill, although such persons are not to be detained after their medical examination, the Clerk to the Local Authority is required to communicate the names and addresses of such persons to the Local Authorities of the places of their destination.

Article 16 provides for the disposal of the bodies of persons dying from Cholera on board of a ship during detention. As an alternative to the requirement that the master should cause the dead body to be taken out to sea and committed to the deep, the Order provides for the delivery of the body into the charge of the Local Authority for interment; but the choice of the alternative is left to the Local Authority or the Medical Officer, whose directions in the matter are to be followed by the master. The article requires the Local Authority to have the body interred when it has been delivered to them for that purpose.

The Regulations with regard to the disinfection or destruction of clothing or bedding by Article 17 of the Order, extend to articles that may have been soiled with Cholera discharges, as well as to articles of personal use likely to retain infection, and the soiled articles are expressly required to be destroyed.

Article 19 contains provisions as to the bilge water and water supply of ships infected with Cholera, and empowers the Medical Officer to take measures in regard to these matters.

Article 20 requires masters of ships infected with Cholera to hoist a distinguishing flag.

Articles 21 to 24 apply to ships which are not infected with Cholera but which have come from places infected with Cholera, or have passengers on board who are in a filthy or otherwise unwholesome condition, and Officers of Customs are empowered to detain such ships.

It is important to notice the definition in Article 1 of the term 'Medical 'Officer of Health,' which is to include any duly qualified medical practitioner appointed by a Local Authority to act in the execution of the Order.

Local Authorities are legally empowered to appoint such temporary officers as may be necessary for giving effect to this Order. As most of the work under the Order will require medical knowledge and judgment, these officers will for the most part have to be qualified medical practitioners; but there is much which may be done, particularly in the operations of disinfection, by intelligent Inspectors acting under the instructions of the Medical Officer.

The Order having superseded the Directions and Regulations of the Board dated 9th September 1893, these have been revoked by the Direction and Regulation annexed; I am also to point out that in Article 6 of the Board's Directions and Regulations of 21st July 1892, a reference to the new Order will be substituted for the reference to the Order of 12th July 1883.

I am further to call upon you to report to this Board, by first post, every case of a vessel arriving within the jurisdiction of the Local Authority, either having Cholera on board, or having had, during the voyage, any person on board suffering from Cholera, and to transmit, as soon thereafter as may be, a report by the Medical Officer upon the circumstances. You will also report to the Board all cases in which certificates are granted under Article 21.

I have to call upon you to submit this communication to the Local Authority without delay.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MALCOLM M'NEILL,
Secretary.

To all the Local Authorities in Scotland within whose District there is a Port or Harbour.

Whereas we, the Board of Supervision, on the 9th day of September 1892, made certain Regulations with a view to preventing the introduction and spread of Cholera in this country:

And whereas provision having been made as to these matters in the Order of Council, dated 9th September 1893, it is expedient that the said Regulations should be revoked:

Now therefore, we, the Board of Supervision, by this, our Regulation, revoke the above-cited Regulations, dated the ninth day of September one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 27th September 1893.

At the Council Chamber, Whitehall, the 9th day of September 1893.

By the Lords of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council.

PRESENT:

Sir George Trevelyan.
Mr J. B. Balfour.

Whereas by an Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Fourth, chapter seventy-eight, it is, amongst other things, enacted, 'That it shall and may be lawful for the Lords and others of His 'Majesty's Privy Council, or any two or more of them, to make such order as 'they shall see necessary and expedient upon any unforeseen emergency, or in 'any particular case or cases, with respect to any vessel arriving, and having 'any infectious disease or distemper on board, or on board of which any 'infectious disease or distemper may have appeared in the course of the 'voyage, or arriving under any other alarming or suspicious circumstances as 'to infection, although such vessel shall not have come from any place from 'which His Majesty, His heirs and successors, by and with the advice of His 'Privy Council, may have adjudged and declared it probable that the Plague, 'or any such infectious disease or distemper may be brought, and also with 'respect to the persons, goods, wares, and merchandise, and other articles, as 'aforesaid, on board the same; and in case of any infectious disease or dis-'temper appearing or breaking out in the United Kingdom or the islands 'aforesaid, to make such Orders and give such direction, in order to cut off all 'communication between any persons infected with any such disease or 'distemper, and the rest of His Majesty's subjects, as shall appear to the Lords 'or others of His Majesty's Privy Council, or any two or more of them, to be 'necessary and expedient for that purpose, and likewise to make such Orders 'as they shall see fit, for shortening the time of quarantine to be performed by 'particular vessels or particular persons, goods, wares, merchandise, or any 'other articles, or for absolutely or conditionally releasing them, or any of 'them, from quarantine; and all such Orders so made by the Lords or others 'of the Privy Council, or any two or more of them, as aforesaid, shall be as 'good, valid, and effectual, to all intents and purposes, as well with respect to 'the Commander, Master, or other person having the charge of any vessel,

'and all other persons on board the same, as with respect to any other persons 'having any intercourse or communication with them, and to the penalties, 'forfeitures, and punishments to which they may respectively become liable, 'as any Order or Orders made by His Majesty, His heirs and successors, by 'and with the advice of His or their Privy Council, concerning quarantine, 'notified by Proclamation or published in the London Gazette:'

And whereas by 'The Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1867,' it is (among other things) enacted (section fifty-six) as follows:—

'Every ship having on board any person affected with a dangerous or 'infectious disorder shall be deemed to be within the provisions of the Act of 'the sixth year of King George the Fourth, chapter seventy-eight, intituled '"An Act to repeal the several laws relating to Quarantine and to make other '"provisions in lieu thereof," although such ship has not commenced the 'voyage, or has come from or is bound for some place in the United Kingdom; 'and nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with or prevent the 'execution of any orders, regulations, or restrictions to be made by the Lords 'and others of Her Majesty's Privy Council pursuant to the said Act; and 'any expenses incurred by any Local Authority in carrying into effect such 'orders, regulations, or restrictions, shall be deemed to be expenses incurred 'by them in carrying into effect this Act; and all penalties imposed by the 'said Act of the sixth year of King George the Fourth, chapter seventy-eight, 'may be reduced by the Justices or Court having jurisdiction in respect of such 'penalties, to such sum as the Justices or Court think just:'

And whereas the Lords of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, by Orders bearing date the twelfth day of July, and the ninth day of August one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, did make certain rules, orders and regulations:

And whereas it is expedient that, in place of the rules and regulations made by the said Orders, other rules and regulations as hereinafter contained should be made:

Now, therefore, the Lords of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, by virtue of the powers in this behalf by the recited enactments or otherwise in them vested, do hereby rescind all such rules, orders, and regulations in the above-recited Orders contained which apply to Scotland, except in so far as they may apply to any proceedings now pending, and they do hereby order as follows:—

such ship while so detained, the Master shall, as directed by the Local Authority or the Medical Officer of Health, either cause the dead body to be taken out to sea, and committed to the deep, properly loaded to prevent its rising, or shall deliver it into the charge of the said Authority for interment, and the Authority shall thereupon have the same interred.

Art. 17.—The Master shall cause any articles that may have been soiled with Cholera discharges to be destroyed, and the clothing and bedding and other articles of personal use likely to retain infection which have been used by any person who may have suffered from Cholera on board such ship, or who, having left such ship, shall have suffered from Cholera during the stay of such ship in any Port, to be disinfected or (if necessary) destroyed; and if the Master shall have neglected to do so before the ship arrives in Port, he shall forthwith, or upon the direction of the Local Authority, or the Medical Officer of Health, cause the same to be disinfected or destroyed, as the case may require; and if the said Master neglect to comply with such direction within a reasonable time, the Authority shall cause the same to be carried into execution.

Art. 18.—The Master shall cause the ship to be disinfected, and every article therein, other than those last described, which may probably be infected with Cholera, to be disinfected or destroyed, according to the directions of the Medical Officer of Health.

Art. 19.—If the Medical Officer of Health have reason to believe that any ship coming or being within the district or jurisdiction of the Local Authority is infected with Cholera, he may direct the bilge water to be pumped out before such ship enters any Dock or Basin; and on the Local Authority providing a proper supply of water for drinking and cooking purposes for persons on board the ship, he may direct all casks or tanks on board the ship containing water for the use of such persons to be emptied and cleansed, and the Master shall cause the said directions to be carried into effect.

III.—Flag to be hoisted by ships infected with Cholera.

Art. 20.—The Master of every ship infected with Cholera shall, when within three miles of the coast of any part of Scotland, cause to be hoisted the Commercial Code Signal Q, being a yellow flag, under the National Ensign, and shall keep the same displayed during the whole of the time between sunrise and sunset.

IV.—Additional Articles applicable to a Ship not infected with Cholera, but which has come from a place infected with Cholera, or has Passengers on Board who are in a filthy or otherwise unwholesome condition.

Art. 21.—When a ship is not infected with Cholera, but has passengers on board who are in a filthy or otherwise unwholesome condition, or has come from a place infected with Cholera, the Medical Officer may, if in his opinion it is desirable with a view to checking the introduction or spread of Cholera, give a certificate in duplicate in the following form, or to the like effect, and shall deliver one to the Master, and retain the other or transmit it to the Local Authority:—

I hereby certify that I have examined the ship from now in the port of and that she has passengers on board in a filthy or otherwise unwholesome condition [or has come from a place infected with Cholera], and that, in my opinion, it is desirable, with a view to checking the introduction or spread of Cholera, that the persons on board the ship should not be allowed to land unless they satisfy me as to their names, places of destination, and addresses at such places.

Signed

Medical Officer [or Medical Practitioner appointed by the Local Authority].

ART. 22.—When such certificate has been given, no person on board the ship shall leave or be allowed to leave the same unless he satisfy the Medical Officer as to his name, place of destination, and address at such place; and such name and address shall forthwith be given by the Medical Officer to the Clerk to the Local Authority, and such Clerk shall thereupon transmit the same to the Local Authority of the District in which the place of destination of such person is situate.

ART. 23.—If the Medical Officer have reason to believe that any ship coming or being within the jurisdiction of the Local Authority has come from a place infected with Cholera, he may direct the bilge water to be pumped out before such ship enters any Dock or Basin; and on the Local Authority providing a proper supply of water for drinking and cooking purposes for persons on board the ship, he may direct all casks or tanks on board the ship containing water for the use of such persons to be emptied and cleansed, and the Master shall cause the said directions to be carried into effect.

(4) Circular re-issuing Memorandum as to the Treatment of Diarrhœa and Cholera.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 27th September 1893.

SIR,—In view of the apprehension of an outbreak of Cholera in this country the Board have deemed it advisable to re-issue the subjoined 'Memorandum 'as to the Treatment of Diarrhœa and Cholera,' and 'Memorandum of Instruc-'tions for Disinfection,' which have been prepared by their Medical Officer, Dr H. D. Littlejohn, for the information and guidance of Local Authorities and their Officers.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MALCOLM M'NEILL,
Secretary.

The Clerk to the Local Authority.

Memorandum as to the Treatment of Diarrhœa and Cholera.

(Issued to Local Authorities by the Board of Supervision.)

Local Authorities, where there are either no medical men, or only a few scattered over the country, should provide themselves with a supply of remedies suitable for the threatened Epidemic of Cholera.

Among these may be mentioned—

1st. Elixir of Vitriol,
2nd. The Lead and Opium Pill,
3rd. The Aromatic Powder of Chalk and Opium,
} of the British Pharmacopœia.
4th. Ordinary Mustard.

A. It is, however, not only of importance that an attack of Cholera should be properly treated before medical assistance is procured, but also that the premonitory Diarrhœa (which may be present for days before the serious symptoms present themselves) should be checked at once. This may generally be effectually accomplished—

(a) By causing persons affected with looseness of the bowels, who are usually very thirsty, to drink freely of cold water, to which elixir of vitriol has been added in the proportion of half a tea-spoonful of elixir to the tumbler of water.

(b) Should the Diarrhœa continue, a lead and opium pill should be given, and the dose should be repeated after every loose motion. If the patient, from weakness, be unable to follow his usual employment, he should be put to bed—care being taken that the limbs are kept warm, and that the bed is kept dry by means of a sheet of oil-cloth, gutta-percha or Mackintosh, between the sheet and the mattress.

B. Should the discharge from the bowels present the appearance of rice water, and should there be urgent vomiting, cramps of the limbs, together with general sinking or collapse, the case should be regarded as most serious, and in the absence of a medical man, mustard poultices should be applied to the belly and chest for half an hour at a time, and should be followed either by fomentations with warm water, or by bran or porridge poultices. These mustard and soft poultices should be alternated from time to time. Meanwhile the limbs should be well rubbed with warm cloths, and the lead and opium pills regularly administered, as directed above.

This treatment may be advantageously employed for all persons above 14 years of age. From 8 to 14 years, the only change recommended in the treatment is that half a lead and opium pill, instead of an entire pill, should be given as a dose. Below 8 years of age, the aromatic powder of chalk and opium should be substituted for the pill, and may be administered in doses of one grain for each year of life. Thus, an infant of 1 year should have one grain for a dose, and under 1 year half a grain, while a child of 6 years should have six grains. The treatment otherwise is the same—care, however, being taken in the case of children not to allow the mustard to remain beyond ten minutes in contact with the skin.

Should there be no Hospital at the disposal of the Local Authority, and should the house of the patient consist of one or two apartments, the other members of the household should be at once removed. The room in which the sick person is lying should, as far as possible, be cleared of furniture, and the other apartment, if any, should be devoted to the preparation of articles of food and to the residence of the attendants, limited in number to a day and a night nurse.

These attendants should be well fed, well clothed, and should be strictly enjoined to attend to personal cleanliness, by thorough washing of the body once a day; and also to carry out the instructions in the Memorandum regarding Disinfection as to the disinfection and disposal of the discharges of the patient.

Should there be a temporary Hospital to which the patient can be removed, he should be conveyed there without delay; if the distance is short, wrapped in a coverlet and carried—the coverlet thereafter to be destroyed by burning; should the distance be greater, in a cart among straw, with a coverlet, both of which must thereafter be destroyed by burning, and the cart disinfected. The woodwork should be washed with the carbolic acid solution, and afterwards with ordinary soap.

After the directions given in the Memorandum as to Disinfection of the apartment from which the sick person has been removed have been attended to, the doors and windows should be secured, and the key taken possession of by the Sanitary Inspector.

Should symptoms of the Disease show itself in a tramp or beggar at some farm-house distant from any village or town, immediate notice should be forwarded to the district Sanitary Inspector. In the meantime, the patient should be placed in any barn or outhouse and treated at once. If resting on straw, the straw should be removed from time to time and burned.

On receiving information of such a case, the Sanitary Inspector should proceed to the spot, accompanied by a medical man. Should he fail in speedily procuring medical assistance, the Sanitary Inspector should go himself to the place with a supply of medicines and disinfectants, and see that the treatment is carried out in accordance with the foregoing directions; and, also, that the directions in the Memorandum on Disinfection are strictly attended to.

It should be distinctly remembered—

1*st.* That persons in ordinary health, not affected with looseness of the bowels, and who are careful to avoid excesses of all kinds and to attend to daily ablution of the body, can act as nurses without any great risk.

2*nd.* That should cholera visit this country, no class of the community is more likely to furnish victims to the disease, and to carry it over the country, than tramps or beggars—it being well known that want of food, want of cleanliness, scanty clothing, and exposure to the inclemency of the weather predispose the body to the infection of cholera. Public Health

3rd. That the timeous administration of medicines checks the premonitory diarrhœa, and prevents the development of the disease.

Hence the importance—first, of attending to the condition of all tramps and of the poorer population of the country generally, and of seeing that they are supplied with the necessaries of life ; second, by means of house-to-house visitation, of ascertaining the state of the general health of the district, and specially the existence of Diarrhœa ; and, third, of supplying suitable remedies for this most important premonitory symptom.

HENRY D. LITTLEJOHN, M.D.,
Medical Officer.

Edinburgh, Board of Supervision,
24th September 1892.

Memorandum of Instructions for Disinfection.

A. In anticipation of the possible approach of Cholera :—

(a) All Local Authorities should at once provide themselves with a supply of Carbolic Acid,* Chloride of Lime, Sulphur, and ordinary Quicklime.

(b) All open drains should be daily cleansed by sweeping, and thereafter dusted with ordinary Quicklime.

(c) Where pipe-drainage has been introduced into houses, and, from the escape of offensive gases, is suspected to be defective,—after thorough flushing with water, a solution of Carbolic Acid, made by adding a gallon of water, either to two wine-glassfuls of ordinary Carbolic Acid or to two tea-cupfuls of the Carbolic Powder, should be passed down the drain daily, or oftener if necessary.

(d) After any dung-heap or other accumulation has been removed, the site of the accumulation should be covered with ordinary Quicklime.

(e) Water used for drinking, cooking, and other domestic purposes, which is suspected to be tainted, should in all cases be boiled.

B. Whenever a case of Cholera is reported to the Sanitary Inspector, immediate steps should be taken :—

(a) To disinfect the vomited matters and discharges of the patient. This may be readily effected by receiving them into vessels containing two pints of the solution of Carbolic Acid already mentioned.

(b) If possible, the discharges, &c., thus disinfected should be buried in the earth at a depth of at least two feet, or, if passed into a drain, the drain should immediately afterwards be well flushed with water.

C. Subsequent precautions in event of recovery or death.

(a) The bedding and clothing should at once be destroyed by burning.

(b) From one to two tea-cupfuls of ordinary Flowers of Sulphur (according to the size of the apartment) should be placed on an iron shovel along with some live coal or peat ; while the sulphur is burning, the door and windows of the apartment should be kept shut, and should be opened only at the expiry of two hours.

(c) The bedstead, the floor, and the woodwork of the apartment, should be washed with either of the Carbolic solutions already mentioned, and afterwards with ordinary soap.

(d) The ceiling and the walls should be thoroughly scraped and washed, and afterwards coated with lime-wash containing four tea-cupfuls of Chloride of Lime to the pail of lime-wash

(e) Articles of clothing which have not been in immediate contact with the sick, or which have been removed at the commencement of

* Either in the form of liquid and sold 'for disinfecting purposes' (this is highly poisonous and must be used with caution), or as a powder commonly known as 'Carbolic Powder.'

Public Health

the illness, should be disinfected by being sprinkled with, and, if necessary, steeped for a night in, the Carbolic Acid solution already mentioned.

(f) Should a death occur, the body of deceased should be wrapped in a sheet which has been steeped in, and thoroughly saturated with the Carbolic Acid solution, and thereafter buried without delay.

(g) No room in which a suspicious case of illness has occurred should be occupied as a living apartment until after the expiry of a week, during which time the windows should be kept open night and day.

(5) Circular as to importance of verifying the Diagnosis of Cases of suspected Cholera by Post-mortem Examination, and Memorandum by the Board's Medical Officer.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 4th October 1893.

Sir,—The Board are impressed with the great importance, should a case of suspected cholera occur in your district, of verifying without delay the diagnosis by post-mortem examination. They are advised that the clinical appearances are often such as to deceive those best skilled in the treatment of the disease, but that the presence of the cholera bacillus leaves no room for doubt. As its presence can only be ascertained by bacteriological examination, they have arranged that when in any case a specimen of the intestinal contents has been forwarded to their Medical Officer, Dr Littlejohn, such examination shall be made by a competent specialist.

A Memorandum by Dr Littlejohn on the subject is annexed.

The Board would anicipate these alternative results, viz.:—either (1) that the natural apprehension in the public mind, on the occurrence of suspected cases, would be allayed by the demonstration of the cause of death; or (2) that, if true cholera were really present, the necessary precautions would meet with ready acquiescence.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MALCOLM M'NEILL,
Secretary.

To the Medical Officer of the Local Authority.

Memorandum by Dr Littlejohn.

A portion of smaller bowel, preferably the lower ileum—about 4 inches in length—should be ligatured and removed.

This should at once be placed in a well-fitting stoppered bottle, previously washed out with rectified spirit, the stoppered end to be secured with sealing-wax.

The bottle should be enveloped in antiseptic wool, or, should that not be available, ordinary wool may be used, well dusted with Iodoform.

In transmitting the parcel by post or rail, it should be placed in a box of any kind, in a tin case or corrugated pasteboard, and directed to

The Medical Officer of the Board of Supervision, Health Office,
High Street,
Edinburgh.

(6) Circular intimating that Part III. of the Public Health Act is continued in force. Public Health.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 16th July 1894.

SIR,—I am directed by the Board of Supervision to inform you that the Secretary for Scotland has continued for a further period of six months the Order putting in force Part III. of the Public Health Act.

In view of the continued prevalence of Cholera in Continental Europe, the Board would once more impress upon Local Authorities, and especially upon sea-board Local Authorities, the necessity for constant vigilance during the coming autumn.

They have to direct the attention of sea-board Local Authorities within whose district there is a Port or Ports to the provisions of the Privy Council Order, dated 9th September 1893, and of all Local Authorities to the Board's Directions and Regulations, dated 21st July 1892, which are still in force, and must be observed.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MALCOLM M'NEILL,
Secretary.

The Clerk to the Local Authority.

(7) Circular asking Medical Officers to Report as to provision made to meet Cholera.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 25th July 1894.

SIR,—There appears to be no doubt that a virulent form of Cholera exists on the Continent, and it is not improbable that the infection may be imported into this country.

In these circumstances, the Board desire to be assured that sufficient provision for the treatment of patients, should cases of the disease occur in your district, has been made by the Local Authority ; and I am therefore to request you to inform me whether, in your opinion, as the Medical Officer of the Local Authority, adequate hospital accommodation has been provided? I am also to inquire whether there are any other measures to which you think that, in the circumstances, the attention of the Local Authority should be directed?—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MALCOLM M'NEILL,
Secretary.

The Medical Officer of the Local Authority.

(8) Circular Recommending that British Cholera, and Choleraic Diarrhœa be temporarily included under the Notification Act.

Board of Supervision,
Edinburgh, 25th July 1894.

SIR,—With reference to the Board's Circular of 16th inst., I am directed to suggest to the Local Authority the expediency of immediate application to this Board, under Section 7 of the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, for the temporary addition of British Cholera and Choleraic Darrhœa to the list of Infectious Diseases detailed in Section 6. The Local Authority will observe (Section 7, Sub-head 6) that, in cases of emergency, three clear days' notice of their meeting is sufficient. The application for the Board's approval should state the period for which the addition is proposed. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MALCOLM M'NEILL,
Secretary.

The Clerk to the Local Authority.

Public Health.

No. 13.—Extracts from Reports for 1893, by County, District, and Burgh Sanitary Officers.

I. On the House Accommodation of the Labouring Classes.

1. Improvements in Miners' Dwellings in Lanarkshire.

In my first report I commented somewhat severely on the house accommodation for the working classes, and particularly that for miners. Since then a large number of miners' houses have been built, and it is but fair to say that, without exception, the new houses are greatly superior to those formerly provided. In the neighbourhood of Bellshill, in the parish of Bothwell, houses have been built by at least three well-known firms, which are far in advance of the old style of miner's house, and reflect credit on the proprietors. They are all at least two-roomed cottages, substantially and neatly built, mostly of stone, well-finished, and free from damp. Attention has been paid to the drainage and closet accommodation, while all have a plentiful supply of good water. One well-known firm has tried the experiment of providing a certain number of their miners' houses with the electric light, and I sincerely hope the result will fulfil their expectations.

I hope that the evident desire of many colliery proprietors to provide good houses for their workpeople will awaken and foster a corresponding desire on the part of the tenants to keep them clean and in good order, and thus remove a reproach which has often been made, and not without reason, against the tenants.

Although the number of houses closed has not been large, yet a great improvement has been made on old property throughout the county, chiefly in providing rain-water pipes, and thus removing one of the most common and avoidable causes of damp. Much, however, remains to be done in this respect, and it is surprising to find many landlords who yet object to the small expense incurred in this absolutely necessary provision, and are quite willing to allow the rain water to drip from the eaves into the foundations of the houses year after year, regardless of the consequences to the tenant.

Dr M'LINTOCK,
County Medical Officer.

2. Improvements in Miners' Dwellings in Fife.

The fewer one-room houses in the district of a Local Authority, the better from all sanitary and moral reasons. The evils of one room for a family can be easily imagined, but they have been described by a master, and to the quick who has written—'I might ask you to imagine yourselves, with all your 'appetites and passions, your bodily necessities and functions, your feelings of 'modesty, your sense of propriety, your births, your sicknesses, your deaths, 'your children—in short, your lives in the whole round of their relationships 'with the seen and the unseen, suddenly shrivelled and shrunk into such con-'ditions of space. It is those small houses that produce the high death-rate of 'Glasgow.'

During the past year a very great deal has been done, chiefly in colliery villages, to improve the condition of workmen's houses. The appearance of whole villages has been altered and improved, and the comfort and health of the occupants of the houses must have been proportionally increased. It is not possible in this report to give full details; but in Halbeath, Fordel, Donibristle, Milesmark, and Parkneuk, very extensive improvements have been carried out, by the provision of rhones and conductors, and drains for the houses, by provision of outside accommodation, and by the general repairs of the houses. Pointing and lime washing walls have a wonderful effect even on very old walls, and these improvements catch the sanitary eye. In the village of Hillend, about a dozen houses were found to be in need of considerable repairs, but the proprietrix closed them voluntarily, and they are now unoccupied. In Halbeath, following our advice, the proprietor demolished about a dozen houses, and built new ones in their stead, and with the various other alterations carried out, the village begins to look brighter. A row of houses in Dunfermline parish I have asked to be completely closed, as worn out and quite uninhabitable. The houses already condemned do not at all complete the list of insanitary houses, but caution has to be exercised in the performance of this duty, and it is always desirable to get new houses built to take the place of those condemned.

The work carried out in Kirkcaldy District in improving the condition of workmen's houses, has been very great, and it is impossible to give more than a mere abstract account of it. What has actually been done does not convey any idea of the amount of energy that has been expended on visits to houses—whether there was likelihood of their being unsanitary or not—on correspondence, reports to, and meetings with, proprietors respecting their premises; but when the result is so eminently satisfactory as the above record shows, the labour is of love. The assistance rendered by the Cleansing of Villages Committee must be gratefully acknowledged, as their visits showed that behind the sanitary officials was a power that could not be ignored, and which was actively in touch with their efforts.

Dr NASMYTH,
County Medical Officer.

3. Improvements in Crofters' Dwellings in Argyllshire.

The crofter and cottar houses in the rural parts of the county are the most difficult to deal with. On the whole the condition of many all over the county is improved, both in structure and surroundings, yet the majority are far from what we could desire. In the parish of Jura (District of Islay) over 140 of that class had the old mud floors taken up, and cement concrete floors laid instead, fixed windows in many were replaced by case and hung sash windows capable of opening or closing.

I also reported on a house at Ballindore near Taynuilt, which has been before the District Committee since my report of 1891. The house is occupied by a crofter and his sister, and consists of three apartments. In one apartment are five head of cattle, in another, two, and in the living apartment, on one side are two beds, and on the other a cow. The Statutory Notice has been served on the proprietor and tenant, the condition of the house brought under the notice of the Local Authority by the County Medical Officer and myself, yet no improvement has taken place. I understand a prosecution has now been ordered by the District Committee, which may decide the question as to whether the proprietor or tenant (being a crofter) are responsible for the condition of such houses.

Mr CAMPBELL,
County Sanitary Inspector.

4. The Housing of Agricultural Labourers in Kirkcudbrightshire.

In this District the houses of this class are generally of a fair average. Old thatched houses are few in number.

The introduction of roof rhones and subsoil drains has improved not a few, and made them almost as good as new. Still throughout the District, both in villages and more rural parts, houses can be found which in a few years will require to be dealt with as uninhabitable. Not only does this apply to very old houses, but also to some of modern erections where there are neither damp courses, eave rhones, subsoil drains, nor strapped walls. I recently dealt with a cothouse which was erected a few years ago. The water was running down the inside of the walls and standing in pools on the floor. Under the bed the floor was a little hollow and contained another pool. The water came down the chimney in such a volume as to put out the fire. The occupier complained repeatedly to the proprietor without getting any remedy, and it is said he was threatened with dismissal from his employment for complaining to me of the above state of his house.

Public Health. The condition of some servants' sleeping-places has also been dealt with as nuisances, the accommodation at one farmhouse being as follows, and which the Local Authority were recommended by me to deal with forthwith, viz. :— The sleeping accommodation for two women servants is in a dark closet under a stair. This closet opens from the kitchen, has no means of light or ventilation except by the door. The measurement is 8 feet 6 inches long, by 7 feet wide, by 5 feet high, giving a gross total of about 300 cubic feet, or 150 cubic for each person, without deductions for bodies, bed, boxes, clothes, &c.

Mr WINTRUP,
County Sanitary Inspector.

5. Improvements in Bothy Accommodation for Farm Servants in Kincardineshire.

During the year six plans of new bothies to be erected in connection with the farms in Lower Deeside District were submitted to the department for approval, and the work in connection therewith is now being carried out. Improvements in this respect are likewise being attended to in the other districts of the county.

Mr GRAHAM,
County Sanitary Inspector.

6. The Housing of Agricultural Labourers in Haddingtonshire.

Last year I gave a general description of the houses occupied by the labouring classes, which, taken as a whole, are superior to those of the same class in most other counties. The defects in older houses are receiving a great deal of attention, and new houses are being erected. At Morham Mains, which was mentioned in my last report, six new farm servants' cottages of a very superior class are at present in the course of erection. The number of houses still continues to be plentiful. Overcrowding does not exist to any extent amongst the resident population, and no case of the kind has come under my notice during the year. During harvest and the potato-lifting season, it, however, frequently occurs that large numbers of the migratory class of labourers—male and female—are found in bothies at farm places. In a case of this kind which came under my notice last season, 15 men and 13 women were found occupying a small house of two apartments. I had no difficulty, however, in getting the party responsible for the nuisance to put a stop to it.

Mr REID,
County Sanitary Inspector.

7. On the Difficulty of Carrying out Sanitary Improvements in the Houses of the Poorest Class.

As mentioned in the report for 1892, a good deal remains to be done with regard to the improvement of the poorer class of cottages and their surroundings. These remarks, as there stated, specially referred to those cases in which either no rent, or a merely nominal one, was claimed by the landlord. In many instances—as in one to be referred to hereafter—the present occupant is satisfied and refuses to move. Landlords under such circumstances may decline to be at the expense of the erection of such cottages as would pass the standard of modern requirements, and the occupants, though sitting rent free, are in most cases too poor to execute the slighest repairs. What is to be done in such a case? The strictly legal course is to apply for a closing order, which, when carried out, will probably add another unit or units to the already crowded closes in one of the neighbouring towns. Healthy families have been and are being brought up in many cottages not in accordance with modern ideas, and migration, such as is indicated above, cannot be considered as conducive to the public health.

Dr CAMERON
County Medical Officer, Nairn.

8. On the same Question.

As time and opportunity permitted I visited all the pauper and outdoor relief pauper houses in six out of thirteen parishes, and next year I hope to complete the investigation and give a tabular statement on their condition generally. Meantime a few general remarks will give an indication, so far, of their condition. There is in every parish what is termed 'poorhouses,' chiefly composed of a group of small houses on the cottage principle. One or two rooms are allotted to individuals as the circumstances require. These houses belong to, or are under the control of the Board, and are of fair structural repair. During the past year some of these have been improved after having been dealt with in having rhones erected and making of drains about the foundations to remove dampness. In this class of houses the regular dependants on parochial relief reside. The other class who, through enfeebled health and other circumstances, receive casual and outdoor relief—these cling to their old homes, which have become in most cases, through age, decay, or want of ability to keep them in repair, quite unfit for habitation. In the parishes of Lairg, Creich, Dornoch, and Rogart, most of these houses are the ones that at one time were attached to the crofts when held by these people or their families, the land being distributed among their nearest neighbours. Most of these outdoor poor pay a nominal rent of from a few shillings up to one pound sterling. In a few cases one or two in the family occasionally does some labouring, and by this means, with the relief they receive, eke out a livelihood of a precarious kind. Since taking this matter in hand it has been a subject of much concern what to recommend as best in the circumstances. To ask these poor to improve their dwellings is out of the question; to insist on the proprietors doing the necessary repairs—where only a few shillings of rent is paid—may mean their eviction. This latter alternative, in my opinion, is the only way out of the difficulty, as if the proprietors refused to repair the houses, in the event of these being shut up as uninhabitable, the Parochial Board would have to provide dwellings for them.

Mr ROSE,
County Sanitary Inspector, Sutherland.

9. On the same Question.

Two houses were closed as unfit for habitation at Cathcart, and 1 at Eastwood. Six houses were closed at Waterside, and 10 at Barrhead. Twenty houses were closed and demolished at Inkermann. Orders were obtained for the closure of 12 houses at Busby, and the proprietors of 10 other houses there expressed their willingness to close them without an order, when called upon to do so. In consequence of the difficulty of obtaining housing for the tenants who would be displaced by the closure of the houses at Busby, I did not feel justified in calling upon the proprietors to close them. The lack of suitable house accommodation for the poorer, and less desirable, class of tenants, is one of the most serious problems which confronts us in the county. The houses just referred to, for example, are admittedly in a grossly insanitary condition, dangerous to the health of the inmates, a menace to the health of the general community, yet we have to suffer them to remain in occupation.

Dr CAMPBELL MUNRO,
County Medical Officer, Renfrew.

10. Lodging-house Accommodation in the Slums of Glasgow.

A special inquiry by the Assistant Inspector into the 'farming' of houses in the Central District revealed the fact that certain individuals rent whole blocks of single dwellings, and sublet them as furnished rooms to parties who, through misfortune, drink, or other causes, have lost their furniture—if ever they had any. One party has 40 such houses, another 22, another 12, and so on. 204 such houses were inspected. The rents paid for these rooms by the main tenant range from 3s. to 10s. per month. He stocks each apartment with a bed, bed-clothes, table, chairs, grate, cooking utensils, and a few pieces

Public Health. of crockery, and charges a weekly rent ranging from 1s. 6d. to 12s. per week. The average rent the 'farmer' receives over the rent he pays is 11s. a month, or £6, 12s. per house per annum. The Inspector reports that 'most of these 'houses are found in the wynds, lanes, and back properties of the City. 'Ventilation is seldom, if ever, attended to, and the virtue of cleanliness is but 'scantily appreciated. These properties are continually in need of repairs, 'and only those repairs which are absolutely urgent and necessary are carried 'out. The rooms are generally occupied by couples, with or without families, 'and, although in the majority of instances one couple only was found in 'occupation, there were cases found of from two to four couples sleeping in 'the same apartment. No regard would appear to be entertained for common 'decency in these latter cases, as not even a screen is put up to hide the view 'between one bed and the other.' These apartments cannot be classed as Common Lodging-houses, and we have tried to control them by registering them as Houses let in Lodgings. A test case was brought before the late Stipendiary Magistrate in 1892, on a complaint that men and women sleeping in the same apartment was a contravention of the regulation (No. 1) which provides that males and females above 10 years of age shall not be permitted to occupy the same sleeping apartment, except in the case of husband and wife. The Magistrate said this complaint was irrelevant, because it did not aver that the males and females were not husbands and wives. He appeared even to allow the mixing of sexes in a room if they did not occupy the same bed.

Sanitary Inspector.

II. On Drainage, Water Supply, and the Pollution of Rivers.

1. House Drainage in Oban: A System of House Certification and Registration.

I am glad to notice that the Inspector, in alluding to the condition of house sanitation, is able to report that 'in several properties the system of drainage 'and fittings has been reconstructed.' I must here refer to a series of regulations and instructions, which, after considerable discussion and deliberation on the part of my Committee, were adopted by them, and received the sanction of the Commissioners in May last. By these regulations a minimum standard has been laid down for house sanitation. All occupiers or owners of houses who desire it will apply to the Sanitary Authority for a certificate, and on the Inspector being satisfied that the sanitary arrangements reach up to or exceed this minimum, a certificate to this effect will be granted, and the house will be entered upon a register—specially kept for this purpose—by the Inspector, and known as the Register for Inspected and Sanitarily Certificated Houses. The Commissioners incur no responsibility in this matter. The certificate is dated at the time the inspection is completed, and is in no way a contract between the householder and the Commissioners, beyond that on the date specified the sanitary condition of the house met with the scheduled requirements. It will be to the householder's advantage to have this condition maintained by re-inspections, and each re-inspection would be endorsed upon the certificate. A small charge, sufficient to cover the cost for time and labour expended upon the inspection, has been determined upon. It must be understood that the system is in every way a voluntary one. I much regret that owing to my illness it has not been in any way tested as yet, and I am of opinion that the season is too far advanced to make any progress with it just now. I hope that the delay will enable us to still further improve upon the minor details of the scheme, and that by another year it will be in full working at a much earlier date than this. It will be, I anticipate, of especial value in the case of lodging-houses. The travelling public are now so conscious of the evils to health lurking in ill-drained houses that they are often suspicious where no real cause for suspicion exists. This certificate will, so far as can be done, put their minds at rest, and will place the householder at once in a more favourable position with any who may be in treaty with him. In the case of private houses also, it will be a source of satisfaction to the heads of families to possess this certificate, and to feel assured thereby that they have done all in their power to be freed from the dangers of deficient drains. A glance at the Inspector's Report will prove the necessity for such systematic inspection, and the good to be obtained from it. He says: 'In 'every case where the smoke test was applied, the first application proved the 'drains more or less defective.' The most hopeful feature for the ultimate success of such a scheme as this appears to me to rest in the fact that it works independently of all compulsory powers. It must create a spirit of emulation amongst those desiring the certificate, and even though at first only a very small section take advantage of it, I am confident that an insignificant minority in its favour will eventually satisfactorily leaven the opinions of those whom we may expect at first to encounter amongst the opposing majority. I am mindful of the fact that we shall probably find anxious tenants will often experience difficulty in converting unimpressionable proprietors and tardy factors to adopt the scheme; but they, too, in time, will, I hope, become fully alive to the benefits derivable from it. With regard to an improved plan for the general sanitation of the Burgh, your Sanitary Inspector has been requested to prepare an exhaustive report upon the present state of matters. I consequently refrain, while this is under consideration, from making any further remarks. His report will be considered in Committee, and at a later stage I look forward to my Committee being prepared with certain definite suggestions to submit to you.

Dr BAILY,
Medical Officer.

2. House Drainage in Dunbartonshire: The Evils of Careless Plumber Work.

The roadmen have reported to the department during the year the erection of 34 new buildings in the county—24 of which were in the Eastern District, and 10 in the Western District. The owners have been communicated with in regard to the drainage, ashpit accommodation, &c., and the services of the department have been more appreciated than formerly; but until Local Authorities have powers similar to Dean of Guild Courts in burghs, and which the County Council have already petitioned Parliament to grant in an amendment to the Local Government Act, the results will not be satisfactory. I examined the plans of a new house recently, and adjusted them. On the work being completed, I was called in to examine the work, and on applying the smoke test to the waste-pipe from the bath, dense volumes of smoke percolated through the ground to the surface from the drain; and on having it uncovered, it was found that the back of the bend had been broken away, which, I presume, had been caused by the plumber allowing a length of the waste-pipe to drop into the bend while he was in the act of fixing it against the wall. The waste-pipe projected through the bend fully three-quarters of an inch, and if the bath had been used, the whole of the water would have found its way into the foundation of the building. On further examination, it was discovered that, at the extreme end of the drainage system, a closet was not ventilated, as shown on the plan which I adjusted. The plumber's attention was directed to the defects, and he replied that —(1) 'I do not know anything at all about 'it,' and (2) 'I forgot that the closet had to be ventilated.'

It will be seen from the foregoing statements that, although plans are examined and adjusted, work may be carelessly performed, and, where there is no supervision supported by law, the results may be disastrous.

Mr DUNBAR,
Sanitary Inspector.

3. Drainage and Sewage Disposal in Lanarkshire.

Considerable activity has been displayed throughout the county in the important work of providing proper means of drainage. The most notable work has been the completion, or practically so, of the Larkhall Drainage Scheme, designed by Mr Tait, C.E., and from which I anticipate great improvement, not only in the health, but also in the appearance of the town.

Public Health.

Of almost equal importance has been the great extension of sewers in Shettleston and immediate neighbourhood, while substantial additions and improvements have been effected at Uddingston, Bellshill, Baillieston, Lanark, and Lesmahagow.

The steady extension of kerb and channel throughout the county, but particularly in the Middle Ward, tends greatly to the rapid removal of offensive liquid matter from the neighbourhood of dwellings.

Closely connected with drainage is the subject of sewage disposal—one which is gradually becoming of more and more importance. No one who has followed the course of action pursued by all the important English counties can fail to see that slowly, but surely, the prevention of the pollution of rivers will be insisted upon throughout the whole country. Now that the Glasgow Sanitary Authorities have announced their intention of purifying the Clyde, so far as they are concerned, it is clear that the question cannot be shirked by the County Sanitary Authorities. I think it well, however, to point out here that, although Glasgow, and towns such as Sheffield, Bradford, and Huddersfield, have found it necessary to construct expensive sewage works, involving a large annual outlay, it does not by any means follow that the county must proceed on exactly similar lines. On the contrary, I am distinctly of opinion that, to adopt the same method uniformly throughout the county above Glasgow, would be unwise and extravagant. In a great many populous places, such as Carluke and Larkhall, the sewage can be dealt with on suitable land at a very small cost, and with quite satisfactory results. Where, from engineering and other reasons, this cannot be done, then it is something to know that there are several chemical agents which can be used for purifying sewage.

Thus we have in Glasgow and Huddersfield the treatment by lime and sulphate of iron and alumina, with subsequent filtration through coke and sand in the former, and through polarite and sand in the latter. At Worthing the Hermite process of treating sewage with electrolysed sea-water is on its trial, while the Scott-Moncrieff process, the alumino-ferric treatment, the system of the International Sewage Purification Company, and others, are all being tested at the present time.

Professor Dewar, of Cambridge, is also engaged in an inquiry at Bradford, where the sewage, or, more properly, the mixture of sewage and manufacturing refuse, is admitted to be the most difficult to deal with in the kingdom, and it is anticipated that the results of this inquiry will prove to be of the highest importance.

Dr M'LINTOCK,
Medical Officer.

4. Sewage Disposal in Perthshire.

The Burgh Authorities of Blairgowrie had a conference with me regarding the disposal of their sewage. I suggested a principle, which has been very largely improved upon by Mr Falconer, their able Surveyor. This consists of a series of intercepting tanks, with a number of diagonal weirs, over which the effluent is allowed to flow, the sewage ultimately is received into a filtering well, the cover of which is placed at an angle of somewhat like 45 degrees, and forms a hinged frame with galvanised wire cloth filled with gravel, through which the effluent has finally to force its way, and thus deprived of its crude particles and a large quantity of suspended matter. The filtering process seems to be performing the functions assigned to it so well that the services of a special attendant are daily required to remove the crude solids from the tanks, and wash away the finely suspended matters lodged in the gravelly filter-beds. The Police Commissioners of Rattray have also communicated with me regarding the disposal of the town's sewage. A different system was suggested here, but objections were raised by neighbouring proprietors, and the matter was then submitted to a Civil Engineer, who has not yet officially reported on the subject.

Mr MACKAY,
County Sanitary Inspector.

5. The Filtration and Analysis of Water.

Filtration of Water.—It appears that the theory of the purification of water by filtration has of late undergone considerable modification. It has now been clearly demonstrated through the investigations of Koch, Frankland, and others that a new filter composed of perfectly purified sand has comparatively little effect in producing either chemical or bacteriological purification of water. This view certainly upsets all our preconceived ideas of the purification of water by passing it through sand and gravel. It has been shown experimentally that although a clean sand filter is unable to satisfactorily purify a water polluted with organic matter, yet in the course of use a layer charged with living microbes is deposited upon the surface, and it is by these organisms, which constantly increase in number, and also penetrate the sand to a slight distance, that both the nitrification of organic matter and the arrest of other microbes are affected. Thus, the longer a filter has been in use the more efficient it becomes, provided, of course, that the surface layer has not acquired such density as to interfere with the passage of the water. The frequent cleansing of the filter-beds, as had been formerly thought to be the proper method, now appears to have been a mistake. The filtration of the London water supplies is now carried out on the method recommended by Koch and Frankland, and the regularly conducted bacteriological examination of these waters by Dr Frankland shows that when filtration is efficiently conducted 98 to 99 per cent., and sometimes even the whole, of the microbes are removed from the samples examined.* We can thus see that by proper filtration a doubtful supply of water may be rendered almost absolutely safe. But as this artificial barrier to its pollution will be subject to break down at any moment, the wisdom of providing a water supply from a source which would render it independent of filtration must be apparent. Koch gives a very forcible illustration of the importance of filtration. He points out that both the towns of Hamburg and Altona in 1892 obtained their water supply from the Elbe, which caused the serious epidemic of cholera in Hamburg, while Altona escaped, although the former drew its water from the river above the town, where it was comparatively pure, while Altona took water lower down, where the river was very much fouler owing to its having received the drainage of Hamburg. Altona practically escaped the visitation of cholera, whereas Hamburg suffered severely. At the latter the water was delivered unfiltered, but at Altona it was carefully filtered. One group of workmen's houses in Hamburg was spared by the epidemic. This group, and this group alone, was supplied with water from the Altona supply. The rate at which water is passed through the filters is an essential element in the filtering process. According to Koch, this ought never to exceed 100 millimetres (about 4 inches) an hour. The average rate of filtration by the London Water Companies is $1\frac{3}{4}$ gallon per square foot of filtering surface per hour. Koch expresses in very decided terms the opinion that the only trustworthy test of the efficiency of filters, and of the freedom of drinking water from disease-causing qualities, is that afforded by the application of well-known bacteriological methods. 'Filtration,' he says, 'is designed to remove particulate poisons, and chemical analysis, which deals only with soluble poisons, can give no information as to the efficiency of filtration.'

Analysis of Water.—As there is no end to the confusion of ideas among people as to the value of water analysis, it may not be out of place to make a few remarks in connection with this subject. In the first place, it may be stated that the application of chemical 'tests,' such as the addition of a few drops of Condy's fluid or of Nessler's solution, to samples of water is generally useless and misleading as an indication of its purity or impurity. A quantitative analysis of at least the nitrogenous matters in water is absolutely necessary. In this way the chemist can give very useful information; that is, he can state whether a given sample of water contains a large or small amount of organic matter, and he can, as a rule, say whether the greater part of the organic matter is of animal or vegetable origin. But he cannot tell us whether the organic matter has been dead or living, whether from a healthy

* Vide Report of the Royal Commission on the Water Supply of the Metropolis London, 1893.

Public Health. or diseased origin—in short, he cannot detect from a chemical analysis whether a sample of water contains the microbes of disease. The chemist is safe in condemning a water containing any marked quantity of animal organic matter although he cannot tell whether it may contain the specific poison of disease, as such a water must always be considered to be of a suspicious character. But when the chemist pronounces a water, from a mere chemical analysis, not only free from excess of organic matter, but to be 'sufficiently pure for dietetic 'use,' he certainly expresses more than his analysis warrants. It is well known that a very insignificant amount of the excreta from the alimentary canal of a patient ill of cholera or enteric fever— so small a quantity as would be inappreciable by a chemical analysis in a previously pure water—would be infinitely more calculated to do harm than a hundred times as much excretal filth from a healthy individual. Instances to prove this could be multiplied, but one may be sufficient to quote. In 1887 an epidemic of enteric fever occurred in the Mountain Ash District of Glamorganshire, when over 500 persons were attacked with the fever. It was found that the epidemic was localised to a part of the district which was supplied by a branch of the main water supply pipe. The water in the different pipes was analysed by A. Dupre for the Medical Department of the Local Government Board. The following quotation is from his report :—'The waters are all soft and leave 'but little residue. The chemical character is almost identical, as, with one 'or two exceptions, all the variations observed are within the limits of experi-'mental error. Taken separately, each of the waters must be considered as 'very pure and free from any indication of sewage pollution.' Notwithstanding the analysis, the circumstantial evidence as to the water being the cause of the epidemic was so strong that the suspected branch of the main pipe was laid bare, when it was discovered that at a certain point it was leaking, and, at the same place, passed through an old rubble drain, the water pipe being actually bathed in specifically contaminated sewage.*

While the chemical analysis of water is of great value, it must be seen that it does not give anything approaching absolute certainty, so far as the disease-producing qualities are concerned. Again, the bacteriological examination of water, while the best indicator of the efficiency of filtration, cannot always show that a water is free from the poisons of disease. Even a combined chemical and bacteriological analysis of water could only vouch for its purity at the time of its analysis. A report of an analysis of a water supply which does not take into consideration the locality of the water, its proximity to sources of human contamination, and other details that might throw light on the possibility of its being contaminated at any future period, is only of very limited value.

Dr MACDONALD,
County Medical Officer, Ayr.

6. Same Subject.

In the Report for 1892 I gave a record of analysis made in this Laboratory up to the end of April 1893. I here give the analysis made from May to December 1893. In this list I do not include a large number of waters that have been under consultation during the year, or subjected to analysis by the Public Analyst. The waters analysed were only those that, in my own opinion, made a quantitative analysis desirable, not as in itself conclusive, but as confirmatory of conditions otherwise suspicious. This year again I emphasise the fact, which is growing clearer and clearer to me every year, that the passing or condemnation of any specimen of water requires a careful consideration of many factors, of which the chemical purity or impurity of the water is often not the most important. Recent research leaves little doubt that so far as specific disease is concerned, the most important form of water impurity is bacteriological. What relation, however, the bacterial impurity holds to the chemical impurity is as yet a matter of doubt. The presumption is that chemically impure waters, as they undoubtedly indicate a greater chance of specific pollution, form also a more favourable culture medium for the poison of specific diseases. But, if these theoretical questions are still matters for investigation, the researches of Koch, of Frankland, and others, leave no doubt on the practical question. The substance of those researches directs (1) that water should be sought as far away as possible from every source of human or animal impurity; (2) that all river or surface waters ought to be filtered through a filter where the sand layer is not less than two feet; (3) that filter beds should be so arranged that filtration takes place slowly enough and regularly enough to permit the deposit of a slimy mud layer, which is found to act as an efficient remover of specific germs of every kind; (4) that collected water should be stored as long as possible. From these propositions it follows that a vast number of rural waters, particularly shallow and deep wells, will be found defective in quality and in situation. In freely-cultivated soil it is extremely difficult to find situations absolutely removed from the possibility of animal taint; but in the great mass of cases it is at least possible, where water can be found at all, to sink a well outside a farmyard, or away from a dung heap. In many cases even these circumstances would be less likely to pollute, if the deep walls were formed on a plan that could be relied upon to exclude surface or subsoil waters. It is gratifying to observe that more and more as the minor water supplies of the county are coming to be dealt with, the old dry stone building is steadily giving place to some form of cemented building in brick or stone. This progress will, I trust, continue; but it has to be remembered that a great leeway has yet to be made up, and that even if our present rate of progress were doubled, we may expect years to elapse before the water supplies of the county reach their minimum of impurity. It is also a thing to remember that the commercial value of pure water is a result of many factors; negatively, pure water, by lessening the chance of specific disorders, tends to prevent loss; positively, by improvement in personal habits, in the domestic machinery, and in the whole environments of living, pure water, in abundance undoubtedly heightens both the individual and collective efficiency. On the ground, therefore, of increased and ever increasing efficiency, even more perhaps than on the ground of specific danger from disease, rural hygienics must now place the demand for pure water. Indeed it is hardly too much to say that the hygienic measure of progress will for some time to come be the demand for better water and more of it.

Dr LESLIE MACKENZIE,
County Medical Officer, Kirkcudbright.

7. Well Water Supplies versus Gravitation Water Supplies.

In this village (Sorbie) and in a considerable part of the region round about, there is a general complaint of the prevalence of intestinal worms in children. One of the local medical practitioners informs me that a very large number of families are thus affected; that, indeed, 'worminess' may be considered almost the normal condition of certain classes of children. Whether this be due to the well water supply, which must frequently come only from the deeper subsoil, more rarely from rock, I am not yet able definitely to pronounce. I have been assured by a practitioner of long standing in another quarter of the Lower District that before the introduction of a gravitation supply to a town within his practice the same condition of 'worminess' might be considered the normal; but that with the introduction of gravitation water this condition practically disappeared. If this be so, we have another most powerful argument for urging everywhere the substitution of gravitation supplies for well supplies. The ordinary mind is too much devoted to the idea that water is unwholesome only when it can be laid down as the cause of some specific disease, in particular as the cause of some zymotic disease; but experience tends more and more to confirm the general proposition that unwholesome water, even where it cannot be considered the cause of a specific disease, is yet a true parent of many minor and obscure troubles that are too evanescent to be considered important.

Dr LESLIE MACKENZIE,
County Medical Officer, Wigtown.

Public Health.

8. How to sink a Deep Well.

Kettle.—The water supply here is from wells, some of which are of a suspicious nature, owing to loose construction. The ordinary manner of sinking wells here is to dig down till water is reached, then build up the well with dry rubble; the water then percolates through the sides of the well, while all surface impurities soak in at the open joints and contaminate the water coming in. The water at 'Kingskettle Well' has always been good since the improvements carried out a year ago, but some of the inhabitants using it have a long way to carry the water. Owing to the prohibitive distance, Mr Henderson, of the Crown Hotel, has sunk a well on his property for the use of the hotel, and as this well is one of very few wells which have been properly sunk and built, I propose to give an account of the same.

From calculations made on the spot, I was of opinion that the body of water supplying Ladybank artesian wells would be found at a depth of 12 feet. In order to get perfectly pure water, and to keep it pure, a 2-inch iron bore tube was pierced down 50 feet, first through 13 feet of sand, then through about 2 feet of clay, where abundance of water was found. I believe it would have been successful if the bore had ceased here, but in order to make certain of the supply, it was put down the distance of 50 feet. On measuring the water in the tube, it was found to rise to within 11 feet of the surface. The earth around was then removed to commence building the well, which was of hard-burnt segment bricks, built in cement. After digging down for about 3 feet, traces of subsoil water were found, so it was deemed advisable to begin building. Six feet of the well was then built, with a diameter of 3 feet 3 inches, and an iron tire placed around the bottom to secure the bond of the first circle of bricks. After this caisson was left two days to set, sinking operations were commenced by excavating the earth inside the well, while it slowly sank by its own weight. After this was down about 8 feet, another 6 feet of building was added, which, after setting, was again sunk by the same process, another 4 feet being added in the same manner after this had set. The well was now 16 feet deep, and the sides water-tight. The bottom had now to be put in, a very difficult matter, owing to the pressure of water from below. After a quantity of clay puddle had been rammed in, stone flags were fitted in, and well grouted with cement. The bore tube was then cut, and water allowed to flow into the well. The water, although a little muddy at first, cleared before morning, and the bottom of the well was seen to be perfectly sound. Another proof of the sufficiency of the well to prevent contamination of the water, lies in the fact that the subsoil water is found at a depth of 4 feet; the water in the well does not rise above 11 feet from the surface of the ground. It is almost unnecessary to state, that had any flaw existed, the surface or subsoil water would have raised the water in the well to its own level. The supply of this well at present is five gallons per minute, but this may be greatly increased by making other outlets in the bore. If all wells in the district were constructed in this manner, there would be few complaints as to the quality of water; but, unfortunately, the majority of wells are built of dry rubble, calculated to draw surface and subsoil as well as deep waters; in fact, they are like trawler's nets, warranted to catch everything within the radius of their attraction. What sewage drainage exists in Kettle is in a very primitive condition, but without a gravitation system of water supply, the best of drainage systems could hardly be kept in a proper manner. There is no scavenger for this village. Several nuisances of the 'foul ashpit' description have been abated here.

Mr STEWART,
Sanitary Inspector, Cupar District.

9. On the Use of Mechanical Means for Raising Water.

Considerable sums have been expended in different parts of the county in obtaining and providing an improved and abundant water service. A novelty in connection with water supply works has been introduced in this county by the erection of several wind-mills for giving off motive power for driving pumps to force water from a low to a higher lever. It will be interesting to observe the development of wind-mills as a motive power not only for working pumps, but for driving other machinery. Hydraulic rams are more certain in their action, but there is no reason to doubt the efficiency of pumps deriving power from wind-mills, if storage reservoirs are provided to contain a quantity sufficient for the requirements of several days. One advantage to be gained by the utilisation of the wind as a motive power, is that springs, with only a limited yield of water, may be found ample for all wants. Ordinary hydraulic rams waste large quantities of water; and a spring is not always so conveniently situated that a pumping ram can be so placed that while driven by impure water from a spring, is itself raising pure water.

Mr ANDERSON,
County Sanitary Inspector, Forfar.

10. On the Use of Hard Water: its Deleterious Effects.

I entered so fully into the question of water in my Report last year that I shall only refer to it in a brief manner. The subject has constantly been kept in the forefront—the Local Authorities rightly insisting that it is a question in which every one is specially interested, and one in regard to which few people can help themselves. The drought of last year was a severe test of our water supply. It proved that the Western District has a large area bordering on a water famine in such an exceptional season, and that consumers were in great straits. The Committee at once appointed a Sub-Committee to inquire into the practicability of bringing a supply from a distance. This Committee will shortly report on the subject. The existence of Royal and Police Burghs, however, with their own separate sources of supply, is an obstacle to the adoption of any very extensive scheme. In this connection, I must again refer to the subject of the hardness of the water as its principal characteristic. It has received too little attention from those selecting a suitable health resort. Many people find the air too strong and harsh, as they think, when in reality it is the hardness of the water.

There is a whole train of symptoms, the result of hard water. After a few day's residence and temporary improvement the visitor becomes low-spirited and dyspeptic; complains of headache and disinclination for mental and bodily exertion; sleep is disturbed, and the functions of the body become irregular—all of which he usually refers to the liver, but fails to find relief from the usual remedies for biliousness.

The extra trouble and expense in washing and cooking, the incrustations in boilers, &c., render the use of hard water extremely undesirable and inconvenient.

As I pointed out in my first Annual Report that while Loch Katrine water, which supplies Glasgow to a large extent, contains only 2·30 grains to the gallon of solid residue (much too low an amount in my opinion) it is quite common in East Lothian to find waters containing from 24 to 60 grains per gallon. When we remember that water makes up $\frac{1}{2}\frac{1}{3}$ part of the weight of our bodies, that it largely makes up the weight of our solid food, it is possible that some want in the system accounts to some extent for the large numbers of people from the west who seek change and recreation in our eastern seaboard.

More and more the county is becoming a great health and recreation resort, which its extremely dry atmosphere, low rainfall, and out-of-door attractions eminently fit it to be. Some such method as the Porter-Clark process should be adopted, wherever possible, for softening the water on a large scale, or that of the late Mr Alderman Hallet for smaller quantities.

Dr CAVERHILL,
County Medical Officer, Haddington.

11. Medicinal Mineral Waters in Inverness-shire.

The subjects that may be reasonably included in a health report are so varied, that to endeavour to exhaust them all each year would almost of necessity mean that some could only be treated in a very casual way. It has therefore been my endeavour in the reports already submitted to the County

Public Health.

Council, while giving yearly elaborate statistics, which, as they accumulate, may lead to very definite conclusions and to valuable results, to take up each year some particular subject and discuss it fully. Thus, in my first annual report, the geology of the county, and the relationship that exists between geological formation and disease was considered ; in the second report the lessons to be drawn from the botany of the county, more especially in connection with climate, were discussed, and the mild climate of many parts of the county, as exemplified by its botany, was entered into with some detail, and it was shown that such plants as Lapagerea, Dracaena, Darlingtonia, Camellia, which are considered tender about London, flourish in the open air on the banks of wild Loch Hourn.

During the past year my attention has been occupied with an investigation into the composition of such natural waters found in various parts of the county that are supposed to have medicinal virtues. This, both from the vast size of the county, and from the fact that very little has been done in this direction, is a very extensive inquiry, and any good results obtained can only be considered part of still better results. But enough has been found to show that within the bounds of the county mineral springs exist of considerable medicinal value. Two of the waters investigated by me, which appeared most likely to yield favourable results, namely, the iron water of Campbelltown and the alkaline water of Bridgend, near Beauly—both wells which have been known for many years—were submitted to Professor Kenwood, of University College, London, for the analysis of their mineral ingredients.

The iron well is situated in the village of Campbelltown, in the parish of Ardersier. Its virtues evidently became appreciated many years ago, as it was conveyed to the main street, and a pump erected ; the pump still remains, but it is no longer in working order, and no longer supplies the chalybeate water. The analysis of this water shows that it is very pure organically. The iron exists in solution in the form of bicarbonate of the protoxide of iron, and when it is all separated and weighed as sesquioxide ($Fe_2 O_3$) it amounts to ·7 parts per 100·000 or ·49 parts of iron per 100·000. The other salts which go to make up the 27 parts per 100·000 of total solids are chiefly sodium chloride, and the alkaline salicates (both in marked quantities), the bicarbonate of lime, and the sulphate of calcium, with traces only of magnesia and potash. As a result of this analysis, it may be deduced that this water contains iron in solution in the form that is most useful. The quantity of iron is small, and the water is therefore a weak chalybeate, but owing to the circumstance that the water contains chloride of sodium in considerable quantity, the efficacy of the water as a chalybeate is much increased. Iron waters alone without saline ingredient are of little use, and when used have to be accompanied by a course of salines. In this water the iron and the salines are combined. The diseases that may be benefited by the use of a chalybeate water include all the various forms of bloodlessness, also neuralgia, and a long category of diseases more especially peculiar to the female sex.

The sulphated alkaline water of Bridgend, near Beauly, showed, when subjected to analysis, that it came from a deep source, and evidently in its passage through the various strata had acquired the ingredients it contained. Of the salts it contained sulphates were most marked. Sodium and magnesium salts were present chiefly as sulphates and chlorides. There was a faint trace of phosphates, and iron was present in very small quantities. The therapeutic value of this water, which may be drunk with safety, and which has been known, used, and appreciated by the inhabitants from time immemorial, is principally due to the presence of the salts of sodium and magnesium in the form of sulphates and chlorides. The water is delightfully cool in summer and is a most pleasant beverage, not only quenching the thirst, but also acting as a tonic and stomachic, as many an old residenter of Beauly knows. The old wives also give it a preference to any other water for making tea. This water should be found useful in the treatment of many complaints—in dyspepsia, in chronic catarrh of the stomach, in sluggish states of the liver, in gouty conditions, in obstructions to the gall ducts, in diabetes, and in many other conditions too numerous to mention, it might be found of service. A correspondent refers to one condition in which it has been found useful :—"The village toper finds the water in the morning a never-failing and an all consoling friend, relieving his parched tongue, soothing his throbbing brain, re-acting on his trembling frame, and setting him up for the trials and troubles of another day of dissipation." This well only requires to be known to be greatly and widely appreciated for the treatment of many ailments, and it is to be hoped that the movement recently set on foot for improving it and making it more accessible will be carried out without delay. There are probably many other mineral springs in the county having a medicinal value; it will be my endeavour to hunt them out and let their virtues be known as widely as possible for the benefit of suffering humanity. 12. On the Pollution of the Gareloch.

Arrangements have now been made for carrying out the remit of the Rivers Pollution Committee, which was to the effect that a report should be prepared including, inter alia, information regarding the currents on the Gareloch, with reference specially to the points at which sewage carried from ships anchored in or plying on the loch might be expected to be deposited on the shores. On the minute of the Rivers Pollution Committee being brought before the County Finance Committee, it was agreed that a sum not exceeding £50 might be expended in making the necessary observations on the currents in the loch. As a result of an advertisement in 'Nature' for a man competent to take observations on currents, several applications were received, and an arrangement was ultimately made with Mr F. G. Pearcey of Owens College Museum, Manchester, who has had experience on the Challenger Expedition. The observations are to be made in the course of the present summer.

III. On Hospitals, Ambulance, and Nursing Arrangements.

1. Reporting Progress in the Middle Ward of Lanarkshire.

Hospital Accommodation.—Under this heading in the Report for 1892, it was stated that sites had been secured for hospitals at Motherwell, Stonehouse, Longriggend, and Shotts, and that plans for these had been prepared by Mr Cullen, under the supervision of a sub-committee and myself. These have been submitted to, and approved by, the Board of Supervision.

All the hospitals are now in course of erection—those at Motherwell (100 beds) and Stonehouse (16 beds) being of stone, while the other two (each 16 beds) at Longriggend and Shotts are of pressed brick, with stone sills and copings. A full description of these hospitals would occupy too much space in this Report, and I hope, on a future occasion, to prepare with the architect a detailed description.

I will merely state here, that the Chairman and members of the Hospital Committee deserve the greatest credit for the encouragement and assistance they have given the architect and myself, in producing hospitals which, we believe, will admirably fulfil the purpose for which they are intended, viz., the prevention of infectious disease by the isolation of those suffering from such disease, and the disinfection of all materials likely to spread infection.

The Dalserf Hospital—Description of Building.

The hospital at Dalserf, of which a short description was given in the same Report, was completed and opened in October of 1893, and has already proved a great boon to the neighbourhood. On more than one occasion it has been entirely filled with patients suffering from scarlet fever, and, although at the time of writing it has been opened six months, there has not been a single death within its walls. The medical superintendent and matron are to be congratulated on this happy result.

The hospital is a wooden building, with galvanised iron roofing, and presents a neat appearance externally, while the wards and rooms inside are cheerful and comfortable. It rests on creosoted wood beams, supported by brick-piers. The walls are formed of two layers of boarding—an outer and inner—with an

Public Health. interspace of 6 inches, in which are two sheets of felting, said to be fire-proof and non-conducting. The wards are heated by Musgrave's stoves, and during the coldest day of winter, with free ventilation, they were quite comfortable.

A plan of the hospital, as first proposed, is given in the Report for 1892. The kitchen block has, however, been entirely rearranged, and two nurses' rooms added to it. It has been found advisable, also, to erect a small detached block, containing a mortuary, disinfecting-room, store-room, wash-house, and coal-cellar, with a covered shed for ambulance or other carriage.

Water is laid on throughout the hospital from the Bothwell water supply.

Cost of the Dalserf Hospital.

The total cost of the hospital has been as follows :—

Foundations and Drainage, and laying out of Grounds,	about	£75
Hospital Buildings,	„	470
Furnishing,	„	160
		£705

The matron and an experienced servant, with a knowledge of nursing, form the resident staff of the hospital. An additional nurse will be provided when necessary.

Dr M'LINTOCK,
County Medical Officer.

2. On Fever Hospitals.

I desire to impress upon the Commissioners the fact that in providing hospital accommodation, while they are conferring a benefit on the community as a whole, they must not regard those admitted to the hospital as recipients of charity, or in the same light as those who take advantage of hospitals provided for ordinary purposes. The person entering an infectious diseases hospital confers rather a favour upon his neighbours by voluntarily withdrawing himself from their midst for the prescribed time, and inflicting upon himself solitary exile, in order that they may not run the risk of being exposed to his infection. The following remarks, quoted from a recent issue of the British Medical Journal, bear aptly upon this point :—'The reason 'the public pays for the nursing, lodging, food, and even the amusements of 'a crowd of people, who, but for a little roughness of the skin, may appear 'and feel in perfect health, whereas it lets poor creatures, to whom every 'minute is a misery, from ulcerated legs and other troubles, struggle on 'unhelped is that sore legs are matters for the individual, while scarlatina 'desquamation is a public danger. Let it be plainly understood that the 'community spends the money entirely for its own protection, not in the very 'least as a charity to those who are taken into the hospital.'

Dr BAILY,
Medical Officer, Oban.

3. On the Increasing Use of Hospitals and Ambulance.

The progress made with preventive measures does not enable me to add under this head anything effective to the report of last year. It is enough to say that the desire to take advantage of the Dumfries Infirmary in the Northern, Southern, and Eastern Districts of the County is becoming more and more pronounced. There is an impression abroad that the objections to hospital treatment are very deep rooted among the rural population ; but my experience does not tend to confirm the impression. The immense advantage of hospital isolation, in a long-continued illness like Enteric Fever or Scarlet Fever, is coming to be appreciated very highly by those whose resources are all too little adequate to the private care of serious diseases. Even in the fairly remote parts of the Southern District I have found one or two cases every way willing to be removed even when the journey by closed vehicle amounted to 25 miles. Two cases recently removed expressed their great satisfaction at the care that had been taken, and, so far as I have yet learned, have been in no wise injured by this long distance. No case is removed without the sanction of the medical attendant. My experience during the last year enables me to say with confidence that, when a proper ambulance is provided, removal of mild cases of Scarlet Fever and of some other diseases will present no serious difficulties of distance. At the same time, hospital isolation cannot be expected to exhibit its full value when patients have to be driven over 10 or 15 miles.

Dr LESLIE MACKENZIE,
County Medical Officer, Kirkcudbright.

4. Same Subject.

It has been my duty to remove a few patients from their homes to Dumfries Royal Infirmary. Some of these were conveyed a long distance in cold wintry weather.

The inconvenience incurred by employing private conveyances for this purpose is considerable, owing to the extraordinary precautions necessary to be taken.

I am of opinion that an ambulance waggon should be obtained, and be stationed at some central situation suitable for each of the four districts.

I may here state that every patient who was removed to the Infirmary expressed themselves as well pleased with the treatment received, and they would advise every one suffering from infectious disease to go there for treatment.

Mr WINTRUP,
County Sanitary Inspector, Kirkcudbright.

5. Same Subject: Arrangements in Perthshire.

The arrangement made by the Committees of the Perth, Central, Highland, and Eastern Districts with the Directors of the Perth Royal Infirmary to provide accommodation for fever cases requiring removal, has been found to work very well, and the facilities afforded by the various Railway Companies to carry the ambulance waggon, with patients and nurse inside, has been fully taken advantage of, and has been found to minimise the shaking, and shorten the journey very materially, as well as to cost less than removal by road. In all, from the four districts, 78 patients have been admitted to the Perth Hospital during the year. The Directors of the Royal Infirmary have spared neither trouble nor expense in fully equipping the Institution for the work. The laundry and disinfector have been found to give the most complete satisfaction, and, in addition to the beds already put at the disposal of the districts for infectious cases, it has been found possible to add three more for observation, a very necessary adjunct to the equipment of an institution which admits all diseases except Small-pox, and even the latter has to be taken in and kept till the diagnosis is certain.

The removal of patients, even from a considerable distance, has been accomplished without any difficulty, and the patients have never suffered from the journey. As an attendant accompanies the waggon as well as the nurse, there is no need for the latter to come out of the ambulance to give directions, and thus the risk of infection to the public is prevented. Two incidents will show the light in which the portable hospital and the ambulance are now looked upon in the parts where they have been used. In one district an application was made to obtain the use of a hospital in which Small-pox had actually been treated, as summer quarters for a family; in another district, as the ambulance waggon was starting on its journey, a much-esteemed clergyman stopped it for a few minutes while he offered prayer and gave thanks that such assistance has been provided.

Dr GRAHAM,
County Medical Officer.

Public Health.

Note.—In reply to a request for further details regarding the conveyance of the ambulance waggons by rail, the Board received from Dr Graham the following information :—

In connection with the removals of patients by rail to Perth, an agreement was completed with the Railway Companies, whose lines traverse Perthshire, in February 1893, by which the County ambulance waggon containing patients and nurse should be carried at the uniform rate of 5d. a mile, with a minimum charge of 7s. 6d., those travelling inside the waggon paying first-class fares and the removals only permitted under a certificate from the Chief District Medical Officer authorising them. When a removal by rail is to take place the waggon accompanied by a nurse in addition to the ordinary male attendant, is sent to the nearest railway station to the house, and horses are ordered to be waiting there to complete the journey. As soon as the patient has been placed in the waggon, the nurse enters and does not again leave until it arrives at the Hospital. The attendant, who whilst removing the patient from the house to the waggon, has worn an oilskin suit, takes off the latter, and travels to the station beside the driver. On arriving at the station the attendant sees the waggon securely loaded, he then procures tickets for the nurse and patients, which he retains, and travelling as an ordinary passenger, he is on the outlook at intermediate stations lest the nurse should require anything so that she can have no occasion for leaving the patient.

The waggon was specially built for long-distance removals, and besides having the usual easy springs and rubber tyres, is provided with wire-woven bed and stretchers.

The following is a list of removals carried out by rail :—

No. of Patients.	Distances in Miles.	No. of Patients.	Distances in Miles.
2	6	5	21
1	10	1	22
4	13	2	23
6	15	3	28
7	18	1	52

In conclusion I may state, that in no instance have I seen a patient in the least the worse for removal in our waggon, in fact, many look much better at the end of the journey than at its commencement.

6. Nursing Arrangements in Kincardineshire.

In order to have at command increased facilities for nursing, the Public Health Committee resolved in May last to retain a second county nurse whose services would be available whenever required. This was done, and nursing assistance was rendered in eleven cases. In four of these all expenses were disbursed by the parties concerned, and in seven by the Local Authority.

Dr MACNAUGHTON,
County Medical Officer.

7. Nursing Arrangements in Ross-shire.

Under this heading I would take leave to refer to district nursing, and the training of nurses. These subjects if somewhat in abeyance, are not lost sight of. There are plainly great difficulties in connection with formulating satisfactory plans of working such institutions. I am glad to say that the Association, of which Dingwall is the head-quarters, is in very successful operation, and that lately, by the energetic exertions of Lady Mackenzie of Gairloch, Mrs Ross, The Park, and others, there has been secured a large accession to the funds of the Society. Sufficient money has also been obtained, by the efforts of Mrs Mundell of Inverlaul, to start a local association in Lochbroom, where I need scarcely say it is much required.

Dr BRUCE,
County Medical Officer.

8. Illustrating the Necessity for Nursing Arrangements. Public Health.

On the 9th of May I received a notification of a second case of Small-pox at Kilmun Homes. The woman attending on the first case was also suspected of having contracted the disease in a very mild form. Other tents were put up for the isolation of these cases, but on visiting the Homes I found that one of the patients was suffering from the disease in a confluent form and showed other symptoms of a very severe, if not fatal, attack. I therefore could not consent to his removal from the room in which he was laid up, into a tent. There was no one to attend on this man except the Superintendent of the Homes, and her time was fully taken up with her own duties. The District Committee had no nurse, nor made any previous arrangement for getting nurses, when required. A lady in Greenock was stated to have consented to come, but as she had not arrived, I went across and found that she had changed her mind. I then proceeded to Glasgow: called at several Nurses' Homes without success. Dr Russell, Medical Officer of Health for the City, could not spare any nurse from Belvidere. He, however, gave me an address in the City where a nurse had been attending a case of Small-pox, removed that morning to Belvidere Hospital. I proceeded to this house and found that the nurse was engaged until the house was cleaned and disinfected. The nurse, however, consented to go and her employer to relieve her, under the circumstances, if I could get another nurse to take her place. This took up some time, but finally I managed to get a substitute and send the nurse to Kilmun, after spending the best part of two days in the effort. The patient died in a few days. I give this more or less in detail in order to show the labour, expense, and loss of time incurred in the absence of proper provision whenever any outbreak of disease requires special notice, not to speak of the value of my time and the neglect of other more important duties in the county during the two days spent in quest of a nurse in the City of Glasgow. I have repeatedly urged on the District Committees and on the County Council the necessity of providing a few nurses, who might be transferred from one part of the county to another when required, but with the exception of the District of Mull nothing has yet been done.

Dr M'NEILL,
County Medical Officer, Argyllshire.

9. Suggesting a Scheme for the Provision of Nurses.

If no decision can be come to as regards Hospitals, at least an attempt should be made to settle the question of Nursing and Attendance of Fever patients. An endeavour should be made to provide even a nucleus of a Nursing-Staff within the county, and it might give this matter a start if the Council were to pay £20 to £30 to a trained nurse as a retainer to her for the attention she would give to poor patients whose friends cannot pay for a nurse of themselves. The services of this county nurse would be given only in such a case as it seemed that such assistance would be absolutely demanded for the better protection of the general public. Without Hospitals in which patients would receive medical and nursing attendance at the public expense, it is hardly possible to organise the medical attendance of fever patients in their own homes; but the question of general nursing by the Local Authority, as such, or by the unofficial help of the Councillors in their various districts, appears to me to be easier of solution. At present there is no organisation of any kind under the Council, or within the county, by which the public can get a nurse who would be willingly paid by the friends of the persons benefited—that is, if the expenses were not likely to be very great. Consequently there is either no skilled nursing at all, or it is provided by the assistance of the doctors—at not a small expense to the relatives of the sick persons, who procure nurses, often, indeed, only after the lapse of very precious time, from the distance of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, &c. The ideal scheme, of course, would be to have a Parish Nurse in each District of the County, and I believe, if the Council would only organise this very necessary business, the money would be forthcoming very soon to pay her, partly from the County Funds for her assistance to the very poor, and partly Public Health. locally, from those receiving extra benefits. Until this is accomplished, the nucleus of one County Nurse would be a starting point, and she could organise to work under her some of the most likely women in the district, to all of whom simple lessons in nursing and the general duties of attendants on the sick might occasionally be given.

—On the Cause, Origin, and Distribution of Disease.

1. An Outbreak of Rabies: Patients sent to the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

(a) Account by Dr Macdonald, County Medical Officer, Ayrshire.

Hydrophobia.—A death from this comparatively rare disease was recorded in the county this year. Several cases of rabies in dogs had been reported during the year. In the month of April a stray rabid dog was alleged to have bitten other dogs about Ballantrae, and dogs supposed to be suffering from rabies were killed in different parts of the county. But the only case of the disease attended with serious results to a human being in the county was that of a boy in the parish of Beith. Dr Syson, Beith, who attended the boy, furnished me with the following notes on the case:—On 16th September, a boy aged 8 years, residing with his parents at the village of Gateside, in the parish of Beith, was bitten on the left side of the face by a stray black retriever dog, inflicting two wounds, one above and the other below the eye. That above the eye was a mere scratch, whilst the other was deep and slightly lacerated. About three hours after the accident occurred the wounds were washed with an antiseptic lotion, cauterised, and dressed by Dr Syson. The boy was kept indoors for a couple of days, and the wounds quickly healed. Although the police were at once set on the track of the dog no definite information as to its antecedents or subsequent movements was obtained. On 31st October, six weeks and three days after the accident, the boy complained of a sore throat, with slight headache, feverishness, pains in the abdomen and legs, and sleeplessness. But, as nothing further had been thought of the dog-bite, there was no apprehension of anything of a very serious nature until the afternoon of the following day, when Dr Syson, on visiting him, found him sitting up in bed, with an anxious, staring expression, restless, his pupils widely dilated, and saliva copiously flowing from his mouth. By this time the boy was unable to swallow any food; even a few drops of water put into his mouth was immediately spasmodically ejected. In spite of every attention these distressing symptoms became worse until the patient died, nearly four days after the onset of the illness.

In connection with the case it may be mentioned that a dog answering the same description was observed on the 17th September—the day following the accident at Beith—in the neighbourhood of Bishopton, Renfrewshire. This dog bit a boy, as well as one or two dogs, at a farm near Bishopton on the same evening. The dog next morning made his appearance in the burgh of Renfrew, where he bit a policeman and another man. The dog was shortly afterwards shot. A post-mortem examination was made upon it by a veterinary surgeon, who declared that it was not affected with rabies. One of the dogs on the farm which was bitten by the retriever subsequently became rabid, and bit a brother of the boy who was bitten by the retriever. The latter boy unfortunately was attacked by hydrophobia, and died on 26th December. His brother and the two Renfrew men were sent to Paris for treatment under Pasteur.

The preventive measures generally adopted against rabies are the muzzling of dogs, and the destruction of ownerless dogs. These measures, if rigidly carried out, would no doubt diminish the number of cases of rabies. But unless the muzzling order would be enforced uniformly all over the country, very little permanent good can result from it. Legislation at present, similar to other piecemeal sanitary legislation, permits Local Authorities to make their own regulations for the suppression of the disease, hence the unmuzzled rabid dogs of one county may bite the muzzled dogs of another. The muzzling of dogs in Ayrshire is not of much use if the dogs in the counties of Lanark, Renfrew, Dumfries, and Galloway are allowed at large unmuzzled. One of the characteristics of a rabid dog is a tendency to run away from his home, so that the mischief is often done many miles distant from his domicile. Even with muzzled dogs, the form of muzzle frequently used affords only doubtful protection. It appears from the Report of the Board of Agriculture that the rabid dogs returned as stray and ownerless in each of the years 1888, 1889, and 1890 numbered respectively 40, 38, and 52 per cent. of the totals. Collar registration of all dogs, if made uniformly compulsory over the whole kingdom, would be useful for tracing out the foci of the disease, as the disease rarely originates where the rabid dogs are first discovered. It has been thought that the enforced muzzling of every dog in the kingdom for six months, and the controlling of the introduction of all dogs from abroad, would abolish rabies and hydrophobia in Great Britain. An instance of the seriousness of importing rabid dogs is found in the case of Madeira. The population of this island is about 130,000; while the number of dogs is estimated to be about 11,000. Nearly the whole of the dogs are of mongrel breed, and many of them are ill-fed and neglected. But no case of rabies is known to have occurred in Madeira before the month of June 1892. In the beginning of this month the disease was introduced into the island, and by the end of the month there was a formidable epizootic among the dogs, cats, and goats in every part of the island. During the height of the epizootic 300 deaths of dogs from rabies were reported in 3 months in the southern half of the island, and in addition more than 100 suspected dogs were killed at the Municipal Depot. The disease ran a rapid course, with a mean incubation period of 25 to 30 days in dogs, and a mean duration of symptoms of 4 to 5 days. In the same part of the island, which has a population of 60,000, there were 9 deaths from hydrophobia. The mean incubation period was from 40 to 60 days. The results of treatment were negative; but one patient, who was sent to the Pasteur Institute, recovered, and remains in good health. When the serious nature of the outbreak was realised it was rapidly stamped out by a universal muzzling order, and the destruction of all sick, suspected, and ownerless dogs. Of the persons bitten by rabid dogs before the Pasteurian treatment was instituted, the average number over all countries that died from hydrophobia was about 15 per cent. In Russia, where bites by rabid wolves are common, the percentage of deaths was about 50. The mortality of persons treated by Pasteur has now fallen to about $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.

Until such measures are adopted as will entirely suppress rabies, it is important that every person bitten by a dog supposed to be affected with this disease should put himself without delay under treatment at the Pasteur Institute in Paris. Pasteur's treatment of hydrophobia by the attenuated virus of rabies may be considered one of the greatest triumphs of modern science.

Outbreak of Rabies.—We were so unfortunate as to have an outbreak of this much-dreaded disease during the year. A short recital of the circumstances of the outbreak as they came to my knowledge may be of interest.

On the evening of Sunday, September 17th, a messenger reached my house, at Bishopton, to ask me to see a lad who had been bitten by a strange dog at a farm about a mile away. On my arrival there, about forty minutes after the occurrence, I found that the boy had been severely bitten on the face by a strange dog, a retriever, which had been fighting with the dogs on the farm, and which, when he called it off, had sprung upon him. I immediately cauterised the wounds, each individual puncture and scratch, thoroughly and freely with caustic potash, and left the case in the hands of the family medical attendant. The day but one after, I learnt the further progress of the dog. In the course of the night, after the occurrence just described, it had reached the Burgh of Renfrew, and had been observed about the streets; in the early morning it bit a workman starting for his work, and a little later a policeman; it was then shot. Upon learning these facts, I instructed a veterinary surgeon to make a post-mortem examination for the information of the sanitary authority, thereafter the remains were sent to a pathologist to be submitted to a bacteriological examination. The veterinary surgeon reported that he found none of the signs of rabies present, and that the dog had died of acute inflammation and ulceration of the stomach, and the results obtained by the bacteriologist were entirely negative. These circumstances were reported to the friends of the boy, to whom at the same time the principles of the Pasteurian treatment of rabies were explained.

The boy's wounds healed slowly 'by secondary intention,' for the cauterisation had been very thorough, and he regained his normal health. On the 22nd December, however, a certain irregularity of breathing, attended by a cough, were observed, and in a day or two the case had declared itself as one of undoubted rabies; the poor boy died on the 26th of December. I was now informed, for the first time, that on or about the 20th of October, one of the dogs at the farm, which had fought with the strange dog, had become ill, behaving very strangely, and snapping at things, and had been shot, but not before its teeth had grazed the skin of a brother of the boy previously attacked, and of a farm servant. Diligent search was made by the police for this latter, who had left the county at the November term, but in vain. In the meantime, Mr Harding, the Chief Constable, without a moment's delay, took charge of the two men from Renfrew, and of the second lad from Bishopton, and only rested when he had left them under treatment at the Pasteurian Institute in Paris. He then very energetically set about the establishment of a fund to defray the expenses arising in connection with the treatment of any cases which might subsequently occur. His efforts met with a liberal response, and a sum of £115 was collected. The authorities at the Pasteur Institute were very reluctant to undertake the treatment of the men bitten so far back as the 18th September; the three men were, however, submitted to a course of three weeks' treatment, returned home well, and have continued well up to the present time (May 1894).

2. Rabies outbreaks in Dumbartonshire and Stirlingshire.

Rabies is not a disease over which, officially, I have any supervision, but in Dumbartonshire, as in some other counties, the Medical Officer of Health has naturally been applied to with regard to arrangements for sending cases to the Pasteur Institute in Paris. In the end of March, a man in the Vale of Leven was bitten by a dog, believed to be rabid, and a subscription was raised locally, chiefly through members of the County Council, in order to have the man sent to Paris. The patient being a workman, ignorant of foreign languages, and unaccustomed to travel, it seemed most convenient to put him under the charge of Messrs. Cook & Sons, the excursion agents. The arrangements were carried out promptly and satisfactorily, and since his return no symptoms of hydrophobia have appeared. On 8th September I had a telegram from Dr Cameron, Dalmuir, that three children had been bitten in his locality by a dog believed to be rabid, and in reply I informed him as to the procedure which had been adopted, both with regard to the case in the Vale of Leven, and two other cases which had occurred at Lennoxtown, in Stirlingshire. Dr Cameron was good enough to take charge of the arrangements connected with these three cases, and as they were children they were accompanied to Paris by a nurse from the Glasgow Training Home. She attended to them in the hotel in which they stayed. It is to be understood that the Pasteur Institute is not an hospital, but rather resembles a vaccination station, the patients not residing in the Institute. In these latter cases also, local benevolence, along with a contribution from the funds of the County Council, defrayed all necessary costs. In both instances a small donation was made to the Pasteur Institute. The children have remained free from the disease. On the other hand, a child in Cumbernauld parish bitten by a rabid dog, was not sent to Pasteur, and subsequently died of hydrophobia. Two children in Lennoxtown, and a bicyclist from Falkirk, had been bitten by the same dog. These three underwent the treatment in Paris, and have remained free from the disease.

On 22nd June I had a message from Councillor Wyllie, Lennoxtown, that a dog believed to be rabid, had bitten two children there, aged 3 and

7. The dog had been destroyed by a blow on the head with a stone, and on the following day Mr Sempill, the Chief Constable of the County, telegraphed to me that he was taking the body to Professor M'Call, of the Veterinary College, for examination. I accompanied him there. Professor M'Call found marked extravasation of blood within the structures of the right cerebrum. This was no doubt due to the blow. The coverings of the brain were also congested, and the stomach contained a considerable quantity of straw, grass, wood, &c. The brain was preserved in spirit, and afterwards forwarded by Professor M'Call to Dr Skerrington, of the Brown Institute, London, in order to be tested for the detection of the virus of rabies. These tests, however, extend over a considerable time, and treatment of bitten persons cannot be delayed until the result of the tests becomes known. After consultation with Mr Wyllie and Professor M'Call, it was agreed that the children should be sent to M. Pasteur. A nurse from the Glasgow Training Home was obtained to accompany them, and the party was put in charge of Messrs. Cook, the tourist agents, who arranged as to travelling, hotel accommodation, &c. The whole costs, which amounted to over £50, were defrayed by private subscription, and no difficulty was met with in obtaining even more than the necessary amount. The children, one of whom had been bitten on the face and the other on the hand, made a good recovery, and have remained free from the disease. In the beginning of August, I learned that a child had died from hydrophobia at Cumbernauld, and that it was believed to have been bitten by the dog which had passed through Lennoxtown. On writing to Dr Love and also to Mr Wyllie, I found that they had no doubt as to this being the case, and Dr Love indicated the route the dog had taken from one part of the country to another, until it was destroyed at Lennoxtown. On the way to Cumbernauld village it had bitten a bicyclist from Falkirk, who also went to Pasteur. The child who died had been bitten on the bare leg, and the wound was cauterised, but the disease appeared in five weeks from the date of the bite. Various dogs had also been bitten, but it was believed that these had all been destroyed. I awaited with interest the result of the inoculation tests at the Brown Institute, and on 23rd March of this year Professor M'Call sent me a copy of a letter from Dr Skerrington, in which he wrote that the brain 'was submitted to a series of tests for the detection of the virus of rabies. 'None of the animals treated from it have developed any signs of rabies, and 'we have all of them still under supervision. As nearly nine months have now 'elapsed, I think that you may take it for almost certain that none of the 'animals will develop rabies. The test will, therefore, have yielded an entirely 'negative result.' It will be seen, therefore, that though there was good evidence that a death from rabies had occurred as a result of a bite from this dog, yet the tissues of the dog itself did not give experimental proof of the disease. In another county an almost parallel case has occurred. The brain of a dog believed to have been suffering from rabies was tested in Glasgow and with a similar negative result. Subsequently, however, one of the persons bitten, who had not gone to Pasteur, was attacked by, and died from, hydrophobia. The facts as to the four persons bitten by the dog killed at Lennoxtown simply are, that three went to Pasteur and continue in good health, and that the fourth remained at home and died of the disease. It would, therefore, seem unsafe to trust to the negative results of these inoculation experiments as indicating that a dog has not been rabid, and where the ordinary symptoms of rabies are present in any animal, the safer course is for bitten persons to submit at once to the treatment, rather than incur the risk of the onset of the disease.

3. Outbreak of Enteric Fever at Kippen, Stirlingshire.

On 23rd November 1893, intimation was received of the occurrence of 8 cases of enteric fever in the village of Kippen. It turned out that, in some of these, indefinite illness had begun so early as 4th or 5th November, but, owing to the previous existence of influenza in the village, the medical attendant had not felt justified in reporting until the cases had developed, so as to leave him in no doubt about the diagnosis. One patient (No. 4 in Table V.), who ultimately died of enteric fever, had had what seems to have been an unmistakable attack of influenza previously. So far as could be ascertained by careful and repeated inquiry, and by consultation with Dr M'Diarmid, the local medical man, the cases began on the dates given in Table V. The first 3 had been attacked almost simultaneously. One of them was a girl living in the dairy above mentioned (dairy A. in the Table). It will be seen from the Table that, though the cases were 40 in number, 39 of them were confined to 11 families, and 32 of the 39 were in 5 families. The 40th case was a nurse.

Public Health.

Before discussing the origin and method of spread of the disease, it will be convenient to state the steps that were taken in dealing with it.

Hospital not available.

The district hospital was only in course of erection, and some of the cases were so severe as to make removal to Falkirk Hospital impracticable. In these circumstances, the Public Health Committee sanctioned the obtaining of trained nurses from the Glasgow Nurses' Home to reside in the village and take charge of the patients. The house accommodation was, however, in some cases so very bad, and the overcrowding so great, that proper treatment of the patients and the stamping out of the disease were alike impossible. Then the trustees of the Public Hall (The Gillespie Memorial Hall) offered to place it at the disposal of the Committee as a temporary hospital, and this offer the Committee gladly accepted. Bedding, furniture, cooking utensils, and all the necessary equipment of a hospital, were obtained with the least possible delay, the hall was sub-divided into two wards, a room attached to it was established as a store and kitchen, and Dr M'Diarmid and the nurses already in the village were put in charge. The hall made an exceedingly comfortable and satisfactory hospital. No doubt it was overcrowded, but not nearly so much as had been the houses of most of the patients, and medical attendance and nursing being concentrated in one building, were carried on to much greater advantage than when the cases were scattered all over the village. The outbreak was of a severe type. In the 40 cases 3 deaths occurred, but the severity is not to be measured by the fatalities alone, for many of those who recovered did so only after a long struggle. Intestinal hæmorrhage complicated 4 cases, and nearly one-half had relapses. Counting from the beginning of illness to dismissal from hospital, one case was under treatment for 107 days, another for 82 days, and two others for 70 days. Dr M'Diarmid and the nurses were unremitting in their labours, and the latter paid little heed to the time to be set apart for sleep and exercise and what not, all as rigidly laid down in the rules of the excellent institution from which they came. The chief nurse herself, unfortunately, was attacked by the disease, and everyone connected with the outbreak was relieved when her convalescence was established. Of the 40 cases in the village, 33 were treated in the hospital and 7 at home. No death occurred among the 33, but among the other 7 there were 3 deaths.

Cost of Outbreak.

The total cost of the outbreak to the District Committee was about £306, exclusive of the furniture, &c., which will be available for the new District Hospital. Of this sum about £25 was expended on nursing in the village previous to the opening of the public hall as an hospital. Deducting this amount, and taking the number of cases in hospital as 33, the average cost per case was about £8, 10s. The amount charged per case by Belvidere and Govan Hospitals has always been £8, 8s., in addition to the cost of removal by ambulance. Measured by this standard the expenditure at Kippen cannot be called excessive.

Dr M'VAIL,
County Medical Officer.

4. Small-pox Outbreak at East Benhar and Uphall, Linlithgowshire.

The District Committee did their duty faithfully, and gave free vaccination to all who were willing to avail themselves of it; and besides in those families where the heads or working members were unable to go to their work, they provided them and their families with all the necessaries of life. There were in all six families in East Benhar and one in Uphall provided for, for a period of an average, six weeks.

Difficulty in Securing a Nurse.

I had considerable difficulty in securing a nurse to take charge of the cases, but was successful in securing Miss Anderson, a Missionary's daughter in Crofthead, who gallantly offered her services, and denied herself the comforts of a good home to labour almost night and day for eleven weeks from house to house in a miners' row. I am happy to state that suitable notice was taken of her heroic action by the Secretary for Scotland.

Cost of Outbreak.

The total cost to the District of these cases, exclusive of the temporary hospitals purchased, was fully £130, which included nurse's salary, washerwoman, message girls, goods supplied to families, interment charges for two bodies, and also articles of bedding, &c. that had to replace that which was burned. The average cost of each patient was £12, and average duration of illness six weeks, which you will agree was a most reasonable figure for small-pox. A number of claims were made by parties who had been prohibited from going to their work, owing to some member of their family being affected with small-pox. These claims amounted to upwards of £40. The District Committee deputed me to settle these claims, which I did for £8, 10s.

Mr FREW,
County Sanitary Inspector.

5. Cholera Precautions in Ross-shire.

The chief matter in which I have been engaged has again been the threatened invasion of cholera, fortunately in this case a false alarm.

The weak point in our County is undoubtedly Cromarty Firth and the surrounding country, and to strengthening its defences our efforts were naturally directed. In this subject Sheriff Johnston took a warm interest, and was able by his energy and persuasion to induce the different Local Authorities to combine for the joint purpose. This involved fixing on a quarantine ground for suspected ships, and arrangements for hospital accommodation on land. The latter point was a difficult and troublesome one, and it is yet doubtful whether any of the Local Authorities will be able to find a site for this purpose. But, fortunately, there will not likely be the same difficulty in getting leave to set up a tent. I entered into correspondence with a firm in London, and got estimates for supplying such an hospital, if it should ever be required, and that on short notice. I hoped to induce the various Local Authorities in the County to combine and procure a tent, with ambulance, so as to have it ready for any emergency of whatever kind that might arise in connection with infectious disease throughout the County, but they did not see their way to adopt my suggestion. I may mention, by the way, that the Western District is taking steps to procure a tent for its own individual use in dealing with infectious disease; and I hope the South-Western and other Districts will follow suit in so praiseworthy and sensible a plan.

Besides arranging for quarantine ground and a hospital site, Sheriff Johnston fixed upon Dr Crerar and Mr Mackenzie, both of Cromarty, as Medical Officer of Health and Sanitary Inspector for the combined District, and also settled their several fees. By the great kindness of Professor Matthew Hay, Medical Officer of Health for the Burgh of Aberdeen, I procured a list of suitable nurses, whose services could be had, if required, so that the County may consider itself fully prepared for any invasion of cholera on its eastern border, and the risk of danger on the West Coast is so small as to be hardly worth arranging against.

Dr BRUCE,
County Medical Officer.

6. Notes on Tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis.—During the year renewed attention has been given, especially in Lanarkshire, to the subject of phthisis or consumption, and the North-

Public Health. western Branch of the Society of Medical Officers of Health has recommended a series of elaborate precautions, extracts from which I desire to place before you, as indicating advanced medical opinion on this subject. So many people, generally in the prime of life, die from this scourge in Great Britain, and usually after prolonged illness, with consequent disablement, that any measures calculated to diminish its prevalence demand the earnest attention of all interested in the public health. In the Middle and Lower Wards of Lanarkshire (I have not got the figures for the Upper Ward) there died from consumption and other tubercular diseases 427 persons during 1893.

The following are the extracts from the Regulations named:—

'1. It has been abundantly proved that "phthisis" or "consumption" is 'an infectious disease.'

'2. It does not appear that this disease is very, if at all, infectious through 'the breath of the patient, but it is quite certain that it is infectious by means 'of the sputum (expectoration) which a sick person coughs up from his diseased 'lung.'

'5. All phthisical sputum (expectoration) must therefore be burnt or 'efficiently disinfected, if any decided measure is to be taken to prevent the 'spread of consumption from person to person.'

'(e) No person, whether consumptive or not, should, on any account, spit on 'the floor or walls of any room, railway carriage, or public conveyance.'

'(i) A consumptive patient should, as far as possible, occupy a separate 'room; and, where this is not possible, special care should be exercised 'in destroying the sputum and excreta of the patient.'

'(l) The walls, floors, and ceilings of the living and sleeping rooms of 'persons suffering from phthisis should be cleaned and disinfected '. . . once in every two months.'

'(m) The room or rooms of a consumptive patient should, in the event of 'death, be disinfected as after death from one of the infectious 'diseases.'

'6. There are several further practical measures which may be taken to 'prevent the contraction of the disease, and which are not difficult to carry 'out:—

'(a) A mother who is suffering from consumption should on no account be 'allowed to suckle her child.

'(b) All cow's milk, especially that for the use of children, should be 'thoroughly boiled before being drunk. . .

'(c) All meat should be thoroughly well cooked, and not be eaten under-'done. . . . .

'(e) The dwellings of all people should be well and freely ventilated at 'least once in every day, and all dark corners and recesses therein 'should be kept scrupulously clean.' . . . .

'7. If the general public and those who are sufferers from phthisis would 'undertake to put the foregoing advice into actual practice, there can be no 'question but that there would, in the next few years, be a marked decrease 'in the fatality from phthisis in this country. Moreover, as it has been 'shown that phthisis, in its less advanced stages, is a curable disease, there is 'every encouragement to adopt these protective and hygienic measures for the 'benefit of a patient suffering from the disease.'

Dr M'LINTOCK,
County Medical Officer, Lanark.

7. On Schools being the Chief Agents for the Spread of Diphtheria.

Having referred to the prevalence of typhoid and typhus fever, I may be allowed to say a word on that of diphtheria. Diphtheria, hitherto, has not bulked largely in our death returns. This year, as may be seen, it occurred in a seriously-epidemic form in two districts, and there were also scattered cases in Mid-Ross. In this disease the whole burden of evidence trends in the direction of infection being carried from person to person, the chief agents being schools. Dr Thorne Thorne, the medical head of the English Board of Supervision, found that on the occasion of an outbreak in a village in Essex the proportion of those attacked who were known to go to school was 59 per cent.; while between 0 and 3 (before the school age) it was only 1 per cent., and only 5 per cent. among those between 3 and 12, who were known not to go to school. He goes on to consider how and why schools should thus favour the spread of the disease, and says :—'The first thing to notice is that it brings together the 'most susceptible members of the community under circumstances which are 'peculiarly favourable to this kind of infection. The children are close to 'each other, and in saying or singing their lessons they have every facility for 'breathing into the faces and mouths of their near neighbours. Consequently 'a child with a trace of diphtheria can easily infect the others. The Educa-'tion Department requires so much wall space and floor space, but if you have 'ever been into one of these schools you will have observed that of the avail-'able floor space fully two-thirds are monopolised by the teacher, while the 'children are piled up at one end, so that the object of giving so much floor 'space is frustrated. The greater the want of ventilation the greater the risk. 'Then, too, children of young age are very fond of passing on sweets from 'mouth to mouth, and of drinking out of the same unwashed cup, thereby 'offering greater opportunity for serial infection. It is the aggregation under 'these circumstances that recalls to my mind the experiment with plants 'removed to the hothouse. The children are brought together, they are 'aggregated in a sort of hothouse, there is a want of ventilation, there is over-'crowding, in fact, special facilities are afforded for infection from one to the 'other—every circumstance that theoretically would tend to aggravate the 'virulence of the diphtheritic poison.'

Public Health.

In Kincardine I investigated the origin and progress of one epidemic personally, and I was quite satisfied that the infection having somehow got into the school was spread from there as a centre to the different houses where it prevailed in the parish. Dr Ross speaks of the history of the outbreak in Barvas, and shows that the schools were one means of propagating diphtheria in his district. In this connection I had hoped to be able to present a report on the present sanitary condition of the schools in the County, compared with what I found it to be in 1891. But I have not as yet been able to get together the returns from the various districts, and must therefore postpone this branch of my subject till next year. I still consider the sanitation of schools the first and most important matter in the Highlands. From different causes, as I have formerly explained, private sanitation must, in the nature of things, make slow progress with us, the chief defects being the universally insanitary condition in many, though certainly not in all respects, of the dwellings of the crofters. It is, then, of the highest importance not only to make sure that the school does not become a factor in spreading disease (and with infectious disease I feel justified in including scrofula and consumption), but that both schools and teachers become exponents of what may be called applied hygiene. I have again started a free class for teachers, in Dingwall, who wish to get the necessary certificates to earn grants. It promises to be well supported, and I sincerely trust it may be successful. But there will be little good in teaching if sanitation be neglected under the very nose of the teacher. The school must have an ample supply of good water, the privies and urinals must be properly situated and kept clean and sweet, and the heating and, above all, the ventilation of the school-rooms must be well planned, and thoroughly and continuously attended to. I am glad to find that my remarks in my first annual report have borne good fruit in many instances, that School Boards are paying increased attention to this, not the least incumbent of their self-denying duties to the public, and more particularly to the tender children entrusted to their charge. The County Council may rest assured that I shall spare no pains to advance the cause of public health in this primary and pressing direction.

Dr BRUCE,
County Medical Officer, Ross-shire.

8. The Measles Epidemic in the Burgh of Paisley: On the Value of the Notification of Measles.

The large number of cases reported, and the consequent expense, have led to considerable discussion as to whether this was not a needless waste of public money. This may appear so at first sight; but the difficulties in Publi Health. preventing measles from becoming epidemic are greater than with any other preventible disease. Measles spreads with great rapidity, which is due largely to the fact that the disease is highly infectious before the appearance of the rash. Prior to this, the child is permitted to run about disseminating infection wherever it goes, with the result that in a few days, from this particular source, the area of infection becomes considerable. This explains the apparent failure of our attempts to cope with the disease so far as numbers are concerned. Although unsuccessful in this respect, we have been fully rewarded in another, which the following statistics must assuredly prove.

The disease has been prevalent during the last six months more or less throughout Scotland, and I think it will be admitted that the type of measles we have in Paisley is the same as they have to deal with at present in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, Aberdeen, Leith, and Govan; still it is somewhat remarkable that the visitation of the disease has not been attended with the disastrous effects on our community as in the burghs which I have mentioned. We find that Leith is the only one of these places where some form of notification is not in practice, and during the past six months they have had a death-rate of 3·5 per 1000 of the population from measles. It should here be observed that not a single case was treated in hospital. I we contrast this with Edinburgh (and they are practically conjoined), we find that, with notification in force, the death-rate was only 1·5 per 1000, and 5·2 of the cases reported were treated in hospital. Again, take Govan, and the death-rate from this cause is 1·6 per 1000, with 4·6 per cent. of the cases notified treated in hospital; while in Paisley we have only a rate of 0·6 per 1000, but with the large percentage of 12·6 cases treated in hospital. This applies with almost equal force to the remaining places.

From these statistics and comparisons it can hardly be argued that we have not been fully recompensed for the outlay. The facilities which the compulsory notification of the disease gives are many. Thereby the sanitary department is made aware of the cases. They are all visited, and we are thus enabled to see that proper precautions are being carried out. Where the hygienic surroundings are bad, the patients are removed to the hospital, where the purer air, and skilled nursing and treatment, play such an important part in the ultimate issue of the case. I know of many cases that would most assuredly have succumbed but for the greater amount of attention bestowed on them as a result of notification.

Dr DONALD,
Medical Officer.

V.—Miscellaneous Extracts on Sanitary Matters.

1. Sanitary Arrangements at Railway Stations.

(a) Inspections in Aberdeenshire.

All the Railway Stations within the District have been examined, and notice sent to the Railway Company where nuisances were found to exist in regard to water supply, water-closet or privy accommodation. No effort has yet been made to remedy or abate the nuisances complained of, although some time ago I went over a list of proposed improvements, along with the Company's Engineer.

Note.—The Railway Company since the date of the Inspector's Report, have intimated that they have agreed at considerable expense to carry out the Sanitary Inspector's suggestions.

Mr REID,
Sanitary Inspector, Aberdeen District.

(b) Inspections in Berwickshire.

Amongst other improvements may be mentioned a new system of drainage in Earlston Railway Station, White Swan Hotel, Earlston; Corsbie farm house, Nenthorn Free Church Manse, &c., in the West District; at Ayton Railway Station, Reston Railway Station, two dwelling-houses in Ayton, Pathhead farm cottages and Renton-barns cottages in the East District; and at Greenlaw Railway Station, Marchmont Railway Station, and four house properties in Greenlaw in the Middle District.

Dr M'WATT,
County Medical Officer.

(c) Inspections in Perthshire.

I had also to approach the Caledonian Railway Company regarding defective water supplies to various stations on their line, and, I am glad to say, with marked success. In certain cases water has been introduced by gravitation, in some by force pumps, while in others the process of filtration has been added in cases where I could not absolutely condemn the existing supply.

Mr MACKAY,
County Sanitary Inspector.

(d) Proposed Inspections in Ross-shire.

Another matter requiring attention and improvement is the condition of the sanitary arrangements in railway stations, and on board steamboats. I am at present arranging for a systematic inspection of railway stations, and have on several occasions, by letter and personal application, urged this subject on the serious attention of the Highland Railway Company. Nothing could be further from my wish and intention than to cause any public panic in connection with travelling, and more especially to be the means of scaring the tourist and sportsman, on whom we in the North so much depend. But I think it must be patent to all who think, that no better means of spreading disease could be suggested than ill-kept closets, and dirty, ill-ventilated railway carriages. I don't think there is much to complain of in the latter respect on the Highland Railway, though perhaps a little less cloth and cushions, in my opinion, would be advisable. What with the carelessness, not to say dirtiness, of many travellers, and the filthy habit of spitting the expectoration, it may be, from a diseased lung, the less nidus that is furnished for infection the better. But as to the closets, both in the way in which they are kept and in the amount of supply of water for flushing, there is room for great improvements. In many stations there is also a deficiency in the supply of good, wholesome water, not only for the convenience of the public, but also for the safety and comfort of the local officials.

Dr BRUCE,
County Medical Officer.

2. Sanitary Progress in Inverness-shire.

In this County the outlook is most hopeful. During the past year some noteworthy progress has been made along various lines as to which a word or two may not be out of place. First of all, several special water districts have been formed, such as the Boat of Garten Water District and the Spean Bridge Water District, an improvement which will be immediately, as well as permanently, beneficial to a considerable population. Then greater attention is being paid to the care of the sick with the view of not merely healing the individual, but also preventing him from becoming a source of danger to his family and neighbours. South Uist, first of all the outer islands, boasts of an hospital of its own, which will be equipped with every appliance possible to alleviate suffering. Skye will soon have an hospital equipped for the treatment of infectious diseases. The excellent system of district

Public Health. nursing is also steadily making way, though there is still abundant room for its fuller development. To myself it is a matter for thankfulness that, in the discharge of the arduous and responsible duties which necessarily attach to the position of Medical Officer to this great county, I have received so much courtesy and assistance from all classes. Personally, I desire to acknowledge this with gratitude, for it has enabled me to overtake work that might otherwise have been still undone, and, from a public point of view, it is equally pleasant and encouraging, for it shows that the community, as a whole, is in entire and earnest sympathy with a department, the object of which is to check misery and prolong life.

More Medical Men required for the Highlands.

During the year I have had several complaints from the parish of Small Isles, which includes the islands of Rum, Eigg, and Canna, about the difficulties experienced owing to the want of a resident medical man. A correspondent writes:—'I may mention to you some years ago a Canna man met with an 'accident. The most skilful man in Anatomy among those on the island 'declared that one of his legs was broken. Next day a boat and crew was 'got ready, and Coll of the broken leg was stretched on the bottom of an 'open boat. They set out for Arisaig, 27 miles distant. On their arrival at 'Arisaig in the evening, the doctor was not at home. Nothing daunted, they 'started for Moidart, and arrived there next morning. The doctor came to 'examine the case, and found out that from under the knee would need to be 'cut off, but alone he could not do it. Word was sent immediately to Fort-'William for a medical man, who came at once. The operation turned out 'quite successful, for Coll is still living in Canna. Please observe the number 'of days the man was in torture. Some one suggested to Coll to bury the 'cut away limb in Moidart, but Coll said how could he be expected on the 'last day to come for that limb, and therefore took it to Canna.' It is to be hoped that arrangements may be come to so as to remedy the state of matters complained of.

Dr OGILVIE GRANT,
County Medical Officer.

3. A Prosecution Case: Improvements carried out by Local Authority at the Expense of the Defender.

In a few cases resort to legal measures was necessary to enforce improvements. The most important case dealt with in this way was that of two houses and a sleeping apartment on the farms of Towie, in the parish of Clatt, belonging to Colonel Leith Hay of Leith-Hall. The condition of these houses was such that the Alford District Committee, after in vain endeavouring to obtain their improvement from the proprietor by representation, decided to take proceedings under the Public Health Act. This was accordingly done in July, 1892. Sheriff Robertson appointed Mr Marshall Mackenzie to examine and report. On September 19, Sheriff Brown, having considered Mr Mackenzie's report, ordained the defenders forthwith to discontinue the nuisances; and on 25th December remitted to Mr Mackenzie to report to the Court if the nuisances complained of had been discontinued. On 4th January, 1893, having heard parties' procurators on the report by Mr Mackenzie—'in respect 'the defenders have failed to implement the order or decree of 19th September 'last, authorised the Local Authority, at the sight of the Medical Officer of 'the County, at the expense of the defender, to perform the operations 'necessary for discontinuing the nuisances complained of.' The improvements were carried out by the Local Authority at a cost of £180, and the case was finally disposed of in October—the Sheriff finding the Local Authority entitled to all expenses.

Dr WATT,
County Medical Officer, Aberdeenshire.

4. An 'Interesting' Prosecution under Section 114 of the Public Health Act, in Renfrewshire.

We were called upon to deal with two meat cases of some interest and importance during the year. The spirit of lawlessness revealed in the circumstances of the first case has a flavour of the old smuggling days. In the early hours of a March morning, Mr Aitken, the Sanitary Inspector for the sub-district, and a police constable, mounted guard upon a slaughter-house at Barrhead, and a carcase which they had found therein. Upon my arrival at the office I found a telephonic message upon the subject, and Mr Little and I immediately drove across. The carcase I found to be tuberculosed, and Mr Little formally seized it, leaving it in charge of the Assistant Sanitary Inspector for conveyance to Paisley. The Assistant Inspector, desiring to make as little fuss over the matter as possible, told the wife of the owner of the carcase that if she would give him the use of their meat-cart, he would have it removed quietly in that. To this she willingly assented. The carcase was placed in the cart, and the horse put in. In the meantime, the owner of the carcase arrived, and had some conversation with his assistant, who was to drive the cart. The lad took his seat, and before the Inspector could interfere, had lashed up the horse and started in full career—not for Paisley, but along the Glasgow Road. The Inspector tried in vain to overtake them. He then made haste to telephone to the police at Pollokshaws to intercept the cart there, but the pace had been swift, and the police were too late. The Inspector arrived at the Glasgow Slaughter-house to find that the carcase had arrived there, had been 'dipped,' and rendered unrecognisable. It was impossible to allow the matter to rest there, and the Committee authorised a prosecution under the 114th Section of the Public Health Act, in respect of the obstruction of an officer employed in the execution of the Act. The defendant was found guilty and fined £3, with £3 expenses. The case, it appears, was the first of the sort in Scotland, and it was appealed in the High Court of Justiciary. The appeal was dismissed.

Dr CAMPBELL MUNRO,
County Medical Officer.

5. On the Disposal of Refuse.

This problem is a difficult one, as the cases of Moniaive, Ecclefechan, and Watchhill (Annan) show, but there is no doubt that it would be greatly simplified if household and other wastes could be utilised on the premises where they are produced. There would then be fewer complaints of nuisances, less need of expensive scavenging and drainage schemes, and fewer cases of pollution of wells and streams. It must, however, be admitted that, so far as our more densely populated localities are concerned, this is very much a counsel of perfection. But I am convinced that these wastes might be utilised much more extensively than they are in our rural and village districts. The water carriage of sewage is by no means an unmixed good. Doubtless it is convenient, but it carries away, usually to cause annoyance elsewhere, what ought to, and could easily, be returned to the soil to become food for the plants on which more highly organised beings depend directly or indirectly for existence. The conversion of nitrogenous organic matters into simpler bodies must take place wherever we may put them, but it will take place under most favourable circumstances and without offence when they are placed in the soil as soon as possible after they are formed. As Dr Poore points out in his interesting work on 'Rural Hygiene,' this may be readily and methodically done with very little trouble wherever a house has a small garden or plot of ground attached, and his experiences, as well as those, often quoted, from Penmaen Workhouse in Wales, show that refuse consisting of excreta, vegetable matters, and even household slopes, can be scientifically and economically disposed of in such a way as to yield a good return, while the expense and annoyance so frequently accompanying the water-carriage system are saved. On Dr Poore's property, which I had an opportunity of visiting last year, the excreta of nearly one hundred persons are daily buried in a small furrow ten to twelve feet in length, which is turned over by the spade. As soon as the excreta are placed in it the earth is thrown back, and there is at once an end of offence and danger. The furrows are dug systematically one row after another, and it takes four years to go over the entire garden (about 1½ acre) in this way. On the third day after the excreta are buried cabbages are dibbled in above them. These flourish well, and are always the first crop, as they flourish best in the freshly manured soil. They may be followed by potatoes, these by celery, the celery by peas or beans, and these again by parsnips or carrots, without any fresh manuring, and with a most abundant yield. Dr Poore's experience is that the excremental refuse confers a fertility on the soil which is not exhausted for years. Not only vegetables but all ordinary fruits are produced in his garden in a state of high perfection, and, as the doctor claims, its fertility and beauty have been highly increased by this daily application to the soil of the pure excreta; while the sanitary results are—(1) that there is no accumulation of fæcal matter near the dwelling, (2) no dangerous conveyance of such matters for long distances by pipes, and (3) a complete absence of nuisance. The cottages are kept clean, and there is no offence to the eye or nose. If excreta can be buried daily an ordinary pail-closet may be sufficient, but on the whole the earth or peat closet will be found to be greatly preferable. The earth should not be stove dried, else the risk is run of reducing, if not destroying, the bacterial agents in it by which the excreta are changed to humus. Both earth and peat have a remarkable power, when not acted upon by heat or chemical agents, of rapidly changing fæcal matter and causing it to disappear, and may be used in the closet four or five times over. Liquid wastes must, of course, be kept apart from solids, but their treatment need not greatly differ. They can very well be utilised among shrubs, &c., in various ways, or in suitable places by means of sub-surface, not sub-soil, irrigation. The practice of throwing them on the ground in the neighbourhood of the house is not one to be commended.

If human excreta and household organic refuse are best dealt with by an early return to the soil one cannot be far wrong in alleging that the same must be true, though perhaps in a modified form, of the farm-yard dungheap. This sometimes becomes a nuisance from its mode of storage and disposal. In the neighbourhood of most manure heaps the air is found to be impure. The carbonic acid is in excess. Other compounds of carbon, e.g., marsh-gas or carburetted hydrogen, ammonia, sulphuretted and phosphuretted hydrogen may be found. Not only the air but the soil and subsoil become liable to pollution, and organic matter is drained away to sink into the ground and perhaps pollute the wells. Now all this means waste. It may be answered that the festering or fermentation results in the production of a more valuable manure. Is this really so? Doubtless the nitrogen in the dungheap is relatively increased and the manurial ingredients are rendered more soluble; but, as Mr Aikman points out in his work on 'Manures and Manuring,' the change may be effected at the expense of a considerable amount of these ingredients. The experiments of the late Dr Voelcker, whom he quotes, go to show that 100 cwt. of fresh farmyard manure are reduced to 80 cwt. if allowed to lie till the straw is half-rotten—to 60 cwt. if allowed to ferment till it becomes 'fat or cheesy'—and to 40–50 cwt. if completely decomposed. 'This 'loss not only affects the water and other less valuable constituents of farm-'yard manure, but also its most fertilising ingredients. Chemical analysis has 'shown that 100 cwt. of common farmyard manure contain about 40 lbs. of 'nitrogen, and that during fermentation in the first period 5 lbs. of nitrogen 'are dissipated in the form of volatile ammonia, in the second 10 lbs., in the 'third 20 lbs. Completely decomposed common manure has thus lost about 'one-half of its most valuable constituents.' This view is more than confirmed by the recent extensive experiments of Holdefleiss, which are quoted by M. Grandeau in his L'Agriculture Francaise et le fumier de ferme, an article which deserves the careful attention of all interested either in agriculture or rural sanitation. In these experiments earth was used as an absorbing agent to cover over fresh dung, about 3000 kilogrammes (3 tons) of earth to a heap of dung weighing 6000 kilogrammes. Six months later, when the mass was analysed, it was found that the total loss of nitrogen was not more than two per cent., while the loss in a dungheap, similarly made up but freely exposed, was 23·4 per cent. Further, the transformation of nitrogen to nitrates had gone on with much greater rapidity in the earth-covered heap, 18 per cent. of the whole being so changed, but only 1·7 per cent. in the exposed dungheap. In addition culture experiments showed that the crops resulting from dung treated with earth and other absorbents were very much heavier than those resulting from untreated dung. These experiments point, I believe, not merely to advances in agriculture, but also to an improvement in the sanitation of our farmyards. It is further of interest to note that a recent writer (Dr Bernard Dyer), advocating the treatment of the dungheap as suggested by Holdefleiss, gives it as his deliberate opinion that unless proper care is taken in the making and preserving of dung the sooner it is returned to the land the better.

Description of the only Crematorium in Scotland, near Glasgow.

On this topic (Burying Grounds) it may be of some interest to note that the only 'Crematorium' in Scotland is at present in course of erection within the Western Cemetery, near Lambhill. The contractors are making good progress with the work, and it promises to be a substantial building, with some architectural character. Quoting from official documents, the following is a short description of the building:—

'The chapel is elevated from 6 to 8 feet above the level of the carriage drive, 'and is cruciform. The nave is 40 feet long, by 10 feet 6 inches broad; the 'central part being intersected by the transepts, so as to give a floor space of '26 feet by 17 feet.

'The front or south elevation is 14 feet broad, by 36 feet high, and has a 'central doorway, flanked by the front and side buttresses, and surmounted by 'three lancet windows, which, along with the doorway, are deeply recessed and 'moulded, and have arched heads, richly carved. Two easy flights of steps 'lead to the chapel, where a central position is occupied by the catafalque, on 'which the coffin is placed during the service.

'The chancel immediately in the rear is elevated 1 foot 9 inches above the 'chapel floor, and has two richly-moulded windows in the gable. It is furnished 'with the essentials for a funeral service, a stone pulpit being placed at the 'angle of the chapel and the chancel facing the mourners, for whom seats are 'provided on either side of the catafalque.

'The transepts are divided from the nave by double arches, springing from 'columns having stone bases and capitals, with marble shafts.

'The vault below the catafalque is 8 feet by 5 feet and 6 feet deep, is 'finished with red tiles, and contains a small hydraulic elevator, by which, at a 'given signal, and without any visible handling, the coffin will be silently and 'slowly lowered into the vault. The mortuary adjoins the vault.

'The space for two incinerating chambers is considerably in the rear of, but 'exactly opposite to, the vault and mortuary, the intervening space forming the 'attendants or working-rooms. Here there are two iron tables 10 feet long, the 'top of which are level with the floor of the incinerating chambers, so that the 'coffin can be passed directly into the chambers.

'The process of cremation to be adopted embodies the results of years of 'observation and experiment, both in England and on the Continent. The 'body will not be touched by the flames in any way, but will be introduced into 'a chamber heated to about 2000° Fah., round which the flames circulate but 'cannot enter. Under this intense heat the body is rapidly resolved into its 'component gases, and nothing remains but a handful of white glistening ashes, 'which, untouched by human hands, fall into the urn placed to receive them. 'The gases into which the body is resolved by the process of cremation are 'passed into the air at the apex of the ornamental tower in the rear, which 'rises 56 feet from the ground. The gases are perfectly harmless, colourless, 'and odourless. The whole process will, it is expected, occupy less than an 'hour.

'The charge for each operation will range from £2, 2s. to £5, 5s., according to 'circumstances. Those who prefer to inter urns in the family burying-place

Public Health.

'beside the remains of their kindred will have every facility for doing so. 'Certain areas of ground have been reserved by the Cemetery Company for urn 'burial.

7. Directions as to the Treatment of Cases of Infectious Disease printed in Gaelic for use in the Highlands and Islands.

Dr Ross, Medical Officer of Barvas in the Lews, reports that at the request of Dr Bruce, the County Medical Officer of Ross-shire, he translated into Gaelic a long and exhaustive set of Rules for the guidance of those in charge of cases of infectious and contagious disease, and also a summary of the more important provisions of the sanitary laws. The Medical Officer urges that such documents be widely circulated throughout the Highlands and Islands.

Dr Ogilvie Grant, County Medical Officer, Inverness, also reports:—Being anxious to give some information to the people as to the steps to be taken in connection with outbreaks of fever, I, through the kind services of Rev. Mr Maclean, Tarbert, have been enabled to issue the Gaelic circular appended to this Report, which gives some information which may be of use to the people in the treatment of those outbreaks of fever which occur too often.

County of Inverness.

Rules to be attended to by those in charge of Cases of Infectious or Contagious Disease, such as Scarlet Fever, Typhoid Fever, &c.

1. The patient should be kept separate from rest of inmates of house, and, if possible, placed in a room in upper floor. All carpets, rugs, curtains, and unnecessary articles of furniture are to be removed from this room. A fire should be kept lighted for the sake of ventilation, and for the purpose of burning up waste materials, as well as for heating purposes. If no special means of ventilation are provided for room, fresh air is to be freely admitted by opening upper sash of window, and draught is to be avoided by causing air thus admitted to pass through muslin or fine wire placed over part of window open. Door is to be kept closed, and outside door a sheet is to be hung up, and kept soaked with solution of carbolic acid.

2. All discharges that pass from patient should be received into vessels containing a saturated solution of carbolic acid.

3. Pieces of linen are to be used by patient instead of pocket-handkerchiefs, and burnt after use. Soiled linen, and other articles requiring to be washed, are to be placed in a pail containing solution of carbolic acid.

4. No cups, glasses, or spoons, are to be removed from sick-room until placed for two minutes in boiling water.

5. No persons to leave room without washing their hands. Those in charge of patient should wear dresses of cotton or some other material easily washed.

6. The other members of family should not make unnecessary visits when infectious disease is present in house.

7. Children from house where infection exists should not be permitted to attend school until medical man in charge of case certifies that they can do so without danger to others.

8. In cases of scarlet fever, special precautions have to be taken when skin is peeling, as the scales are highly infectious and are easily carried about. The body of patient should be daily rubbed with oil, and when sufficiently recovered frequently bathed. The patient is not to mix with rest of family until peeling has entirely ceased, and is not in any case to return to school until six weeks after commencement of illness. In measles, similar precautions to be taken, but if desquamation and cough have ceased, patient may return to school, if permitted by medical attendant, in three weeks.

9. On the termination of illness, a final disinfection has to be carried out. All linen and cotton articles, after having been placed in disinfectant solution should be boiled. Woollen articles of clothing and bedding, &c., which cannot be boiled, should be spread out and hung up in sick-room. Close the fireplace, windows, and all other openings, and disinfect room and its contents with sulphur, by putting a pound of sulphur on an iron dish placed over a pail of water, and placing burning coals among sulphur. Then close door of room, and allow room to be shut up for twenty-four hours. The room is afterwards to be well ventilated; all the furniture and other articles are to be removed to open air, and there brushed, washed, or beaten. The walls, floors, ceiling, and all surfaces should be swept or washed, special care being taken to prevent dust being left in crevices or corners. To make disinfection thorough and complete, the paper should be stripped from wall, and ceiling whitewashed; and any article used by patient which cannot be properly cleaned should be destroyed. The final disinfection should be carried out under the supervision and to the satisfaction of the sanitary inspector.

10. If case end fatally, the body should not be removed into another room, nor should any article be taken out of room until disinfection is carried out.

Sanitary Laws. Public Health.

Attention is particularly directed to the following Provisions of the Sanitary Laws in reference to "Infectious Disorders."

1. The owner or occupier may be required to cleanse and disinfect any house or room, and the articles contained in it likely to retain infection—where infectious disease has existed—under a penalty not exceeding £1 a day for neglect.
2. Any person who lets a house, room, or part of a house, in which there has been infectious disease, without having such house or room, and all articles therein liable to infection, disinfected to the satisfaction of a medical practitioner, is liable to a penalty not exceeding £20. This applies to public-houses, hotels, and lodging-houses.
3. If any person suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder shall enter a cab or other public conveyance, without informing the driver thereof that he is so suffering, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5.
4. Any person suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, such as fever, scarlet fever, small-pox, measles, &c., who exposes himself in any street, public place, or public conveyance, and any person in charge of one so suffering, who exposes the suffering, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5.
5. Any person, who, without previous disinfection, gives, lends, sells, or transmits, or exposes any bedding, clothing, rags, books, toys, or other things which have been exposed to infection, becomes liable to a penalty not exceeding £5.
6. Any person having infectious disease in his house must notify the same to the medical officer of health.

County Medical Officer.

VACCINATION.

Vaccination.

No. 14.—Report by Superintendent of Central Vaccine Institution for Scotland for the Year ended 31st July 1894.

Central Vaccine Institution for Scotland,
4 Royal Circus, Edinburgh,
1st August 1894.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit to you my Report for the year ended 31st July, 1894.

The number of applications for Lymph has been 495, of which 428 were from Parochial Vaccinators and Medical Officers of Health, and 67 from other Practitioners.

I have distributed in all 3223 charged tubes, of which 2939 were sent to Official Vaccinators and 284 to other Practitioners.

The frequent reports made to me of the success obtained in vaccinating with the Lymph sent and the absence of complaints, warrant me in saying that it has given general satisfaction.

Five applicants have asked for Calf Lymph, and have been supplied through the National Vaccine Establishment, Whitehall.

This very limited demand need not of course be understood as indicating the extent to which Medical Practitioners have taken to vaccinating with Calf Lymph; but it is reasonable to conclude from the above figures that the time-

Vaccination.

honoured Jennerian method of vaccinating infants from infants still holds its ground among us. The facilities which it affords for vaccinating the population effectually and safely are so great that the loss of them is not likely ever to be compensated by the advantages, real or supposed, which are peculiar to vaccination from the calf.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

The Secretary,
Board of Supervision.

NOTE.—In classifying this return:—Bequests in English money have been added together by taking the capital value as stated by the Inspector of Poor, and bequests in Scots money have been dealt with in a similar manner. In many cases, however, the amount stated by the Inspector is the original amount bequeathed, and does not represent the present value of the investment.

A Merk Scots = 1s. 1⅓d. sterling.

Where the capital value of land was not stated in the return, the acreage has been given, and, where neither value nor acreage was shown, the revenue derived has been classed under the two heads of 'Money' and 'Kind.'

Where the capital value of house property was not stated the rentals were added together, and where it was not possible to include a bequest under any of the foregoing heads it has been shown under the heading 'Miscellaneous.'
